Accreditation System in Russia

Issues with current system
- “Global Universities”
letter to President Putin:

- ~ Change the system
- ~ Lack of independent assessment: insufficient qualifications of reviewers
- ~ Create federal committees of experts
- ~ Introduce assistance to institutions with poor results

Russian Duma plans to discuss this in the fall of 2018.

Accreditation in Armenia

Accreditation process and documents

What is accreditation?

The primary purpose of state accreditation is to assure educational institutions, students, families, employers, and interested public that the institution operates with a high level of quality in education and is recognized by the Government.

Accreditation is a process by which educational institutions and academic programmes are recognized for their performance, integrity, and quality that entitles them to the confidence of the educational community and the public. Accreditation is granted for a certain period and guarantees that the institution or academic programme has the necessary capacity to provide education for a definite time span.

Accreditation entails that the institution maintains the standards that endow its graduates to gain admission to other reputable institutions of higher learning or to achieve credentials for professional practice.

Both, institutional and academic programme accreditations are carried out in three consecutive phases:

- First phase: self-evaluation (a written report of the institution's internal review) conducted by the educational institution;
- Second phase: site visit carried out by an independent external expert panel;
- Third phase: decision made by ANQA's Accreditation Commission regarding the granting or denial of accreditation status.

AIKA / AIC becomes a full member of ENQA

The European Association for Quality Assurance in Higher Education (ENQA) has taken their decision about granting full membership to the Quality Agency for Higher Education (AIKA), which is a valuable decision in the Latvian higher education area for further higher education area development and AIKA's operation.

This decision by ENQA confirms that both Latvian and foreign higher education stakeholders can trust higher education quality assessments.

The Quality Agency for Higher Education (AIKA) of AIC since its first year of operation has been heading towards compliance with the Standards and Guidelines for the European Higher Education Area (ESG), thus fostering the increase of higher education quality.

The decision about granting the status of the full ENQA member to AIKA means that AIC has been recognised a reliable and trustworthy cooperation partner in the higher education area.

The screenshot shows the TARTIP website interface. At the top, there is a logo with the text "ТАРТИП" and a search bar. Below the logo is a navigation menu with links: "Homepage", "About company", "Projects", "Technologies", "Services", "Products", and "Contacts". The main banner features a blue background with a graphic of people interacting with a large smartphone and puzzle pieces, with the word "Projects" on the left. A sidebar on the left lists several categories: "Documents authentication", "Validation", "Web-AriAdna", "The Uniform electronic system of education management", and "Open School". The main content area is titled "Documents authentication" and includes a sub-header "Leave the related information" and a form field for "The purpose of inspection (optional)". Below this is a section titled "Enter the document data" with several form fields: "Holder of document" (set to "Individual"), "Document Type" (set to "Diploma"), "Document Number" (with a dropdown set to "CC" and an input field), "Properties" (with checkboxes for "Duplicate", "With Honours", and "In 3 languages"), and "Document Owner" (with a text input field). Below the "Document Owner" field, there is a note: "In the dative, as in the representative of the document in Russian." and an example: "For example: Аманжолу Уолну Болотбековичу / РОДОВУ Михаилу Васильевичу / Мейржан-теге Канату Сарсембек уулу". At the bottom of the form, there is a keyboard layout with Cyrillic characters.
