

Queen St. W. & Beaconsfield Ave.

The concept behind each model in the t&k collection is created by merging the contemporary with the classic. Every style is titled after a street in Toronto which holds historical significance within the city, and also a connection to designer, Jag Dhillon.

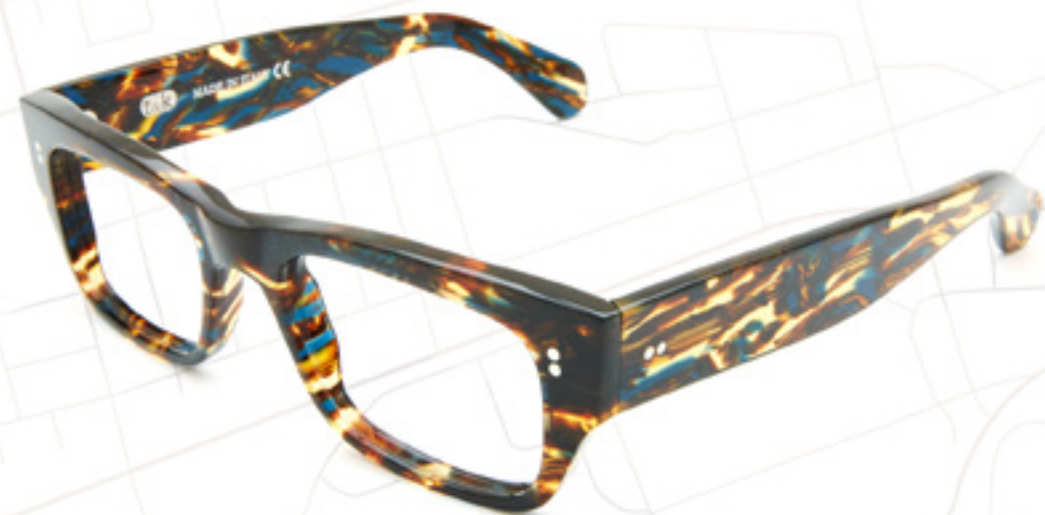

With an emphasis on aesthetic detail, all eyeglasses in the t&k collection are meticulously produced with traditional methods. The frames start with the highest quality Cellulose Acetate, a natural raw material that is the specialty of Italy's Mazzucchelli, which has been plying its craft from 1849. The styles are assembled by hand at a small family-run factory in Northern Italy. To house these beauties, custom cases have also been designed in Toronto by Jag Dhillon, and assembled in Italy - just like the beautiful eyewear.

Jag Dhillon

The Man Behind the Vision

With more than a dozen years in the eyewear business, optician Jag Dhillon has his sights on expanding his influence within the industry. As the founder of Spectacle, with several locations in Toronto, he has always championed emerging designers and innovative styles. This season, Dhillon is proud to announce a selection of new eye candy to covet: Dhillon's own signature collection, t&k, which focuses on custom finishes, superb craftsmanship and a myriad of colours.

Dhillon's decision to launch his brand came after many successful collaborations with world-renowned designers such as Oliver Peoples, Cazal, Moscot and ic! berlin. The collection's name, t&k, pays homage to his father's and late grandfather's first initials - two men who have always inspired Dhillon. Additionally, the frames are each named after streets in Toronto, and so he sees the collection and styles as "a mesh of the two worlds which I come from."

The entire t&k collection is available online as well as Spectacle's Toronto locations and other select retailers.
