Meet the artist

The Koskela Gallery is pleased to present:
Waymbul - Slowly, Gently, a curated collection of works by Kuku Yalanji ceramicist and founder of Waymbul Studios, Meg Croydon.

Waymbul is a Kuku Yalanji phrase meaning, 'slowly, gently,' - the ethos behind Waymbul Studios and guiding principle of Croydon's practice as a First Nations multidisciplinary artist.

"...This won't be seen necessarily, but hopefully more felt. I took on making these pieces very slowly. I usually start building a piece and finish it up soon after, making them smaller pieces. This time I let them speak and they begged to be bigger pieces."

- Waymbul Studio founder,
Meg Croydon on her practice

The exhibition features hand-crafted vases, bowls and bespoke sculptures with Croydon experimenting with shape, texture and glaze.

"It's been more about establishing a respect and relationship with the clay. I usually have a little note book of shapes I've journaled prior as a starting point, however I usually don't get around to most as the clay mostly has it's own mind."

- Croydon

Waymbul Studios is a sustainable practice, recycling clay off cuts and utilising solar kilns.
