New Realities

Every summer I try to pick a new destination. I normally never go to the same place, because I considered my personality. I would get bored soon.

In general, I like to go to sea destinations because I love to lie in the sun and I find them more relaxing. In August, I really feel like relaxing to be back in September, with a fresh mind, new ideas and new inspirations...

I travel a lot for work, but every summer I like to visit new places and learn something new which can enrich me and make me discovering new realities. Love

Great Escapes

Designers are hanging up their sketchpads and heading off in search of sun and sea – or musing about a dream destination, as these postcards attest. For more vacation plans, and our final installment of Summer Madness, see pages 12 to 21.

JUST BECAUSE IT'S MUGGY doesn't mean New York isn't magical. Here are a few can't-miss outings for the remaining weeks ahead.

OFF THE ISLAND

• New Age Manhattanites will be trekking up to Sullivan County to revisit their childhood summer camp glory days with The Assemblage's first Camp Remember. There will be singing, a talent show and bonfires, natch. And yes — kiddos are welcomed. If you're looking for a women-only experience, The Wing is hosting its first Camp No Man's Land in the Adirondacks. Wildflower arranging, pickling 101, capture the flag, and a bro-less beer pong tournament are on the agenda for the weekend.

Looking to get upstate for your own weekend away? The Catskill Carriage — a luxury coach service in the vein of The Jetney — launched this season to shuttle you and your precious cargo in glam fashion to your Sullivan County destination of choice.

And for the first time, even Governor's Island is considered a getaway. Collective Retreats has opened glamping accommodations just a short ride from the tip of Manhattan.

ART

• Just because doesn't mean New York doesn't skip on the buzz — a collection of exhibitions, Narcissus Kusama runs so you have to make it. No figure out to Fort Tilden. On your catch sight, bach's Flower est project Fund. The historic fire public rides before docking at Pier 25 in mid August.

One of New York's most cherished activities during the summer is taking in a performance from the Public Theater's Shakespeare in the Park. This summer's production of "Twelfth Night" runs through Aug. 19.

FOOD

• The season's most anticipated opening, Manhattan, finally revealed its 60th floor views to diners earlier this week. The latest from Danny Meyer brings on chef Jason Pfeifer of Per Se, Noma and Gramercy Tavern cred, and offers updated American classics against views to dazzle even the most jaded New Yorker.

A few blocks away at Brookfield Place, downtown taco favorite Seamore's has popped up with an outdoor airstream bar and takeaway counter. And another fashion favorite,

HAMPTONS

• Though many have been hightailing it out to the Hamptons since Memorial Day weekend, the season is just getting into full swing. At the Southampton Arts Center, longtime Hamptonite Peter Marino brings his exhibition, "Counterpoint: Selections From the Peter Marino Collection" for display July 28 through Sept. 23. The works, which are a continuation of his show at the Bass Museum in 2014, will be unveiled with a free public reception on July 27 from 6 to 8 p.m. "I'm always evolving as a collector and as an architect and naturally the collection has evolved as well," Marino says. "In terms of Southampton, like any of my architectural projects, it responds to context."

David Zwirner is following the art crowd out east with a book pop up at Pilgrim Surf + Supply's Amagansett shop, open from Aug. 1 to Sept. 16 at 4 Amagansett Square.

And on Aug. 5, Christie and Sailor Brinkley are hosting a day of workouts with New York's top trainers, called Southampton Sweat. The likes of Akin's Army, The Class by Taryn Toomey, AKT by Anna Kaiser, Mile High Club Outdoor Run and Dogpound are on the day's roster.
