From vacuum to va-va-voom

Those multi-talented people at Dyson have swapped vacuums for hairdryers for their latest innovation. So determined were they to produce a styling product that stands up to the success of their cleaning gadgets, Dyson built a dedicated state-of-the-art research and design lab. The result? The Dyson Supersonic hairdryer, which features fast but focused airflow (it's up to eight times faster than other hairdryers), and includes a motor small enough to fit in the handle, making it light and comfortable to use. It also controls the temperature for protection against extreme heat damage. Featuring four heat settings, three airflow settings and a cold shot, they've also created magnetic attachments including a smoothing nozzle and a diffuser, allowing you to dry and style at the same time. NEW HEALTH BOOSTER

Feeling tired, run-down and lost your radiance? We've found the latest must-try supplement. The brainchild of lifelong friends Alice Mackintosh, a Harley Street nutritionist, and business entrepreneur Rosie Speight; the Equi London supplement is designed to easily slot into a busy lifestyle by combining daily nutritional needs with new technologies. There are two supplements to choose from. 'Beautiful' combines all your body's daily nutrient requirements with specific skin-boosting technology, supporting hormone balance and digestion, while helping with skin conditions such as eczema, acne or premature signs of ageing. The 'Fundamental' supplement is a multivitamin designed to alleviate low energy, poor concentration, bloating and weakened immunity. Available online at equilondon.com and net-a-porter.com (from 6 June)
