

Watermelon Card Tutorial by Jeannie Lieu

Jeannie LDRScreative.com insideoutheans.wordpress.com LDRS creative

Happy Summer everyone! I really love summertime and the fact days are just longer, sunnier, and happier! For both of my cards, I masked off half the card and used distress inks to color up the card so it'd resemble a watermelon.

My first card is super simple: I literally masked off the card horizontally, added the ink, stamped the sentiment and watermelon, and colored in the watermelon. That was the card! SO easy, right?

For my second card, I added a little more to it. I masked off the card vertically for this one and inked it up the same. I used LDRS Watermark ink so I could do heat embossing on black cardstock. I wanted the "You're one in a melon" sentiment to be a strip across the bottom of the card.

Jeannie LDRScreative.com insideoutheans.wordpress.com LDRS creative

Jeannie LDRScreative.com insideoutheans.wordpress.com LDRS creative

Next, I decided that I wanted to stamp out a bunch of watermelons. I use the LDRS Raven Hybrid ink for this since the seeds of the watermelon are solid, so I want a good impression for each image. After doing so, I'll fussy cut all these images and it's ready to assemble.

I lined up the watermelon horizontally and added the sentiment strip. Such a simple card but it really packs a nice (fruity) punch!

I hope your summer is going well so far, and I hope this inspires you to make some simple cards.