Audo reissues a series of rediscovered mid-century lighting designs. The epitome of contemporary urban design, Wing is the perfect fusion of traditional Nordic craftsmanship and modernism. Originally produced by Bergbom, a Swedish lighting manufacturer established in 1940, the Wing series is now available exclusively at Audo. Wing’s design focuses on both functionality and elegance. With strong architectural presence and tongue-in-cheek details, Swedish designer Kenneth Bergenblad’s 1980s lamp takes its cues from a bird in flight – represented by its folded metal shade that appears to float on air. Set on a slender frame, the polished aluminium shade rotates to direct the light to wherever it is needed, creating playful shadows and engaging movement. Versioned in floor and table iterations, Wing’s minimalist aesthetic means it blends seamlessly with any interior style, illuminating spaces with its natural presence.

About The Designers

The son of a sculptor and artist, designer Kenneth Bergenblad was born in Sweden in 1944. His foray into the world of design began in his teen, where he studied cabinetmaking, completing his apprenticeship in 1965 before going on to study at the Academy of Fine Arts in Copenhagen. Between 1970 and 1993 he worked as both a designer and interior designer at DUX, where he created the internationally acclaimed Spider chaise longue and lounge chair. Known for his elegant and modern design, combining the functional with the experimental, Bergenblad balances shapes, colours and materials into pieces that feel timeless. His work has won numerous accolades around the world, including The Guldlampen Nordisk Design prize for Wing. Today he works from his farmhouse home in southern Sweden, continuing to create designs that surprise and delight.
