LOVE IS IN THE EAR

The edgiest jewellery is all over ears right now, and the blingier, the better. Emma Watson, seen here, has certainly embraced the look. You don't need extra piercings, either. Designs such as Delfina Delettrez's "jacket" earring and Sophie Bille Brahe's pearl crescent are anchored in one hole and simply clip up or around the ear.

ARMED AND DANGEROUS

As Elle Macpherson and SJP amply demonstrate, the modern wrist is a busy place, with a host of bangles circulating around a serious watch. "It's a pyramid of dressing," says Sasha Sarokin, buying manager at Net-a-porter.com. "The base is your watch. The next layer up is a substantial piece. You can have more than one, but not as big as the watch. For me, it's my Anita Ko bracelet." Equally, it could be a Cartier Love bangle or a Shamballa Jewels pearl bracelet. "The next step is the fine-jewellery friendship bracelet — Brooke Gregson semi-precious gold chains woven with thread sell very well." Or you could go with a Carolina Bucci Lucky design. Then it's about piling on what she calls "nude" bracelets, "delicate bracelets that become part of you — Diane Kordas is the master at this". Watch-wise, go for the classic rose gold Rolex Oyster Perpetual, or the Cartier Ballon Bleu, as seen on Kate Mid's wrist in Oz.
