

CROWNING GLO
Benedict Cumberbatch
playing Shakespe

CRIMINAL MIN
A real-life Victor
whodun

PL
The top chefs cooking
a storm in Cornv

Living the fairy tale

Charlotte Church grows up in the spotlight

Wear a scent

London-based jeweller Diane Kordas's new Amulette collection is comprised of 18ct-gold necklaces that can be filled with your favourite perfume. They incorporate the designer's signature motifs, including fine lines of diamonds and asymmetric stars set with diamond pavé. Even the stoppers are precious, made from black onyx or encrusted with more jewels. 'I believe a piece of jewellery should be both casual and classic – but above all, timeless,' Kordas explains. From £2,305, from matches fashion.com.

Earning her stripes Designer Annelie Schubert won the prestigious Première Vision Grand Prize at last year's Hyères International Festival of Fashion and Photography (the jury included Carine Roitfeld), and has now collaborated with Petit Bateau on a limited-edition women's collection. She has given the label's signature Breton stripes a twist with clever draping and pops of lime. If you thought you couldn't possibly justify another marinière, here's your excuse. Dress, £109, petit-bateau.co.uk.

Hello, sunshine Holiday booked but nothing to wear? Visit Harrods' pop-up holiday shop, in-store until July. Think Soludos espadrilles to take you from the plane to strolling from town; boho Misa dresses to solve the beach-to-bar conundrum; and Paloma Blue's daintily printed silk separates – lovely on location or under tailoring back home. Top, £99, and shorts, £105, Paloma Blue, from Harrods (020-7730 1234).

Bard form Today it is 400 years since Shakespeare's death, and to honour his legacy, Smythson has created a special-edition notebook collection. Inspired by its 1925 Bijou Shakespeare set, the books are covered in Panama cross-grain leather, and each one has a famous quote stamped on it in gold. £45 each or £240 for the boxed set of six, smythson.com.