• SAY IT WITH A MEDALLION •

These epic conversation-starters come courtesy of Lanvin. Alber Elbaz punctuated his autumn ensembles with stonking necklaces that read "You", "Love", "Happy" - even "Help". NB: This isn't a dressed-down moment - layer up with chunky chains and wear with a satin cocktail dress.

7 Covet the luxe knuckledusters

Knuckledusters, pimped. This new breed of "punching rings" certainly pack a punch. Debuting in multiple guises - from Diane Kordas's coiled serpent ring, which snakes its way around two fingers, to Delfina Delettrez's triple gemstone stunner and Susan Foster's epic knuckleduster boasting three of her signature faceted diamond slices - these are well worth fighting over. Fists at the ready...

Envelop ears in their entirety

Dries Van Noten traced the curve of models' ears in chunky faceted crystals. Roberto Cavalli looped a blossoming bejewelled flower around lobes and Aminaka Wilmont hooked a tribal-looking mohican around hers. Take note, this is a single earring moment: think big - a puny punkish cuff just doesn't cut it.

• EMBELLISH TRESSES •

There's something about a flash of gold in the hair, a flicker of pewter falling from tresses that feels beautifully medieval. For autumn, Rodarte's warrior queens sported golden barbed-wire hairbands, cuffs and earrings on the catwalk, and at Maison Michel, Laetitia Crahay melds chunky ID chains to ruched elastic. Consider them your modern-day tiara.
