

Flaming lips

There are two types of red in this world – classic and pure sass (this look is very much the latter). 'Tone-wise, this pop of bright vermilion is somewhere between a blue and orange red, which makes it wearable for most skin tones,' says make-up pro for Bourjois, Naoko Scintu. Throw out your lip brushes, this mouthy hue is all about irreverence. 'Smudging the edges and paring against dewy skin keeps the look youthful, modern and a little sporty,' adds Scintu.

BEAUTY

WORDS BY GEORGE DRIVER

I was a total goth at school,' admits Brit actress Stefanie Martini, who also happens to be owner of the most Bond girl name ever. If you didn't see this Kate-Winslet-meets-Romola-Garai beauty wearing twee Gucci-esque knitwear in the 60s Inspector Morse prequel Endeavour, you may have noticed her donning a corset in Julian Fellowes' latest period drama Doctor Thorne (it's the new Downton Abbey, dontcha know), so she's not exactly your standard Marilyn Manson fan. Catching up en route to Budapest to film Emerald City, (Wicked fans take note), we talk FKA twigs, fake tan and festival hula hooping. You've done the 60s and Victoriana for TV, what's your beauty vibe when you're just you?

I love experimenting with colour. I used to work on the shop floor in Harvey Nichols so I'd try a different lipstick every day. One minute I'd wear black, the next, it would be bright purple. At the moment I'm obsessed with MAC's Morange lipstick. Today's looks were awesome, really bright and poppy. The green banana line and the white eye makeup were cool, although maybe a little extreme to wear day to day!' Sounds like you've got your make-up down...

'Oh I've definitely had disasters. The first time I tried self-tanning, I didn't have a clue what I was doing. I was standing in the bath and accidentally turned the shower on so I ended up with water lines down my legs. I had to paint in the gaps with foundation, it was the worst.'

Any celeb beauty inspo?

'Scarlett Johansson is just stunning, she's the closest thing to old Hollywood we've had since Marilyn Monroe. I love FKA twigs as well. She does whatever she wants and enjoys it. I'm all for trying new looks, but I'm not sure I could pull off kiss curls quite as well as her!' What about your Victorian locks for Doctor Thorne?

It was a strong centre parting, sort of like Victorian 90s curtains, which is definitely an interesting look to pull off. The poor hair team had a tough time with me because my hair is kind of like a cloud. It took are op ut all the curls in my hair for rehearsals and then because it's so first twould just drop out and they'd have to redo it all again for filming it's fair to say you're landing pretty awesome roles right now...

I still lose my shit though. When I got the call about Doctor Thorne I absolutely lost it – I was screaming and jumping around, so year it definitely hasn't worn off. I don't think it ever will?

We heard that you're pretty into baking and hula hooping?

My friend went to South America where she met some people from the circus, so when she came back she taught me how to hula hour That's what happens when you live in the West Country and there nothing else to do! And I love baking. I haven't actually watched The Great British Bake Off, but my signature bake are these cookies that can make without a recipe, and I made a rainbow layer cake for friend's birthday, which was actually really therapeutic. Basical whenever someone's desperate for baked goods, I'm like, "I'm on it."

And you're a bit of a festival girl?

I went to Outlook in Croatia a few years ago, which was amazing. I won a beach jumping off cliffs into the sea. The best thing about festivation is it doesn't matter if you look like an absolute crazy person. I can the dealing with people who bring hair straighteners and a full makebag. Give me glitter and wet wipes and I'm good?
