Armstrong Siddeley Lancaster

The third livery of the 1:43 scale Armstrong Siddeley Lancaster brings us a Langham Grey version. This elegant immediate post-war sports saloon was made by Armstrong Siddeley between 1945 and 1952. The four door, 6 light saloon body was made of steel and aluminum panels fitted over a wooden frame, bought in from the famous Mulliner company. With a sunshine roof fitted as standard, a rare wire wheel option and four-speed gearbox, it was the epitome of style after the dark days of WWII.

Bentley S1 Continental Fastback Coupé

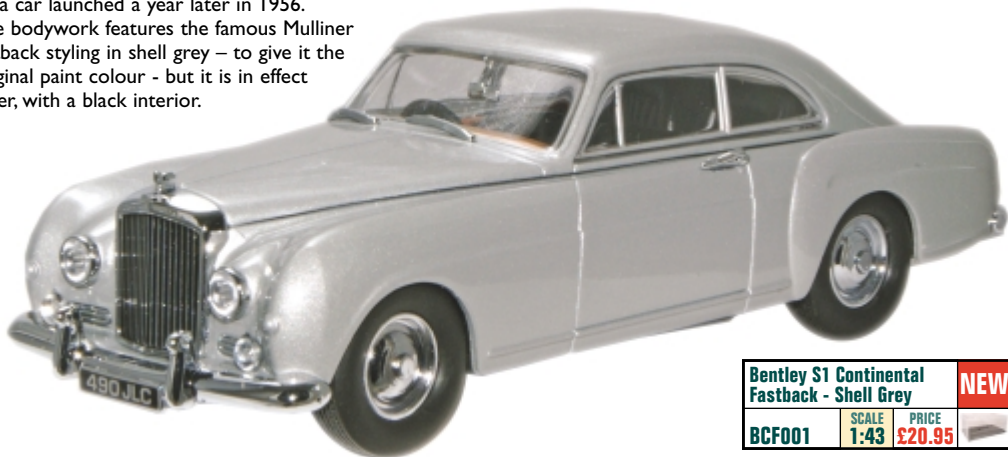

Prestige, style and affluence are epitomised in the superb, newly tooled 1:43 scale Oxford replica of this 1950s car.

At first glance the S1 type did not appear much different from its predecessor the R type but it was entirely new, with a host of improvements. The S type was officially introduced in April 1955 and our version is based on a car launched a year later in 1956.

The bodywork features the famous Mulliner fastback styling in shell grey – to give it the original paint colour - but it is in effect silver, with a black interior.

In real life, the majority had automatic gearboxes although a very small number – only about 16 – were fitted with a manual gearbox. Power steering also became an option from 1956 onwards.

Our model, with registration 490 JLC, has had some illustrious owners in the past, including Sir Alan Sugar and Elton John.

MAN TGX D-TEC Combi Trailer – Robert Laidlaw Haulage Ltd of Falkirk.

New tooling in our Oxford's haulage fleet brings you a 1:76 replica of an equally new modern truck in real life and what's more, we've chosen a very popular Scottish livery as our first release.

Robert Laidlaw Haulage Ltd of Falkirk was founded by the current owner/driver Rab Laidlaw in 1972, with a Dodge 16 ton truck with tipper body. Today, his modern fleet also includes Volvos, Leyland DAFs and Scania's, each wearing the eye-catching red and blue tartan. The thrust of his business is servicing his major clients, as the chief contractor for Calor Gas in Scotland.

The D-TEC trailer is suitable for the loading of containers from all of the popular Railway scale brands. The rear section can hold 45,40, two 20 or one 20 foot container. It also splits into 2 sections

DAF 105 (SSC) Nootboom Low Loader – A P Hollingworth

The third livery on the DAF 105 Super Space Cab comes in the predominantly red and blue livery of West Yorkshire based A P Hollingworth. Founded in 1923 by Albert Parker Hollingworth, the company is now in its third generation. From a single vehicle used to transport stone from local quarries back then, the company now has a modern fleet of heavy low loader and platform trailers to take both abnormal loads and general cargo up to a maximum of 150 tonnes. Based on a 2010 Hollingworth vehicle, the model is a colourful addition to a collection of contemporary heavy haulage lorries.

Tonibell (with cow) Bedford CA Ice Cream

Enthusiasts collecting the Oxford series of Ice Cream Vans will agree this is an absolute cracker! The latest all over pink liveried Tonibell van represents one of the most famous ice cream vending companies of the 1960s.

The Tonibell vans, launched in 1960, were originally blue but changed to the 'hot pink' colour in 1969 and have remained in this colour scheme ever since. The Tonibell ice cream chimes were unique, as was the Tonibell cow on the roof, although this feature disappeared in the 1970s when the vehicle suppliers to the company changed. Their slogan was famous too - 'Make Mine a 99' - which was emblazoned on the sides of the van.

There were lots of other colourful images to attract sales, including windows full of pictures and prices of the different ices on offer. Many of these have been faithfully reproduced on the Oxford replica, including the cautionary signs on the rear of the van - 'Slow' and 'Watch that Child'. The model carries the registration number DTU 250F and we wonder how many of you may have queued up for your '99' at this particular van, with the Tonibell Cow chiming and looking down on you from the roof.

Heinkel HE162		NEW
AC019	SCALE 1:72 PRICE £11.99

Heinkel He 162A-2 Salamander (Volksjäger) II/JG 1 Einsatz Gruppe 1, Leck, Germany 1945

The Heinkel He 162 Volksjäger (People's Fighter) was a German single-engine jet-powered fighter aircraft used by the Luftwaffe in WWII. It was designed and built very quickly, taking its first flight in December 1944 and entering service in 1945. Only around 170 were built but it was one of the fastest of the first generation of jets.

The German Air Ministry named it Volksjäger but other names included Salamander - the construction codename, and Spatz (Sparrow), which the manufacturers – Heinkel – called it.

The Oxford Aviation replica recalls the final days of WWII in Europe and the final combat operations involving the He 162. Our model comes in the authentic He 162A-2 livery of dark green with blue grey underside.

Arado AR196 A-3. 2.SAGr 125 Crete, Eastern Mediterranean, 1941

The Arado was a German reconnaissance seaplane which served aboard many of the famous German Navy ships of the day, including the cruiser Graf Spee and battleship Bismarck. It was designed by Walter Blume and over 500 were built by the German firm Arado between 1939 and 1944. The Arado AR 196 enjoyed great success and was loved by the pilots for its easy handling both on land and on water.

The new Oxford Arado release of the A-3 variant comes in the livery as it was operated by 2.SAGr (Seeaufklarungsgruppe) 125 based in Crete, in 1941. The Arado was deployed as a reconnaissance plane escorting merchant ships in the area. Our model is decorated in the dark green camouflage livery with duck egg blue underside.

VW Beetle

The VW Beetle, also a newly tooled Oxford introduction this autumn, is another cult car that is still revered and loved today. So loved was it that film-makers produced a series of movies in which a VW Beetle, called Herbie, was almost humanised and his antics were enjoyed by enthusiasts of all ages.

The new Oxford VW Beetle is decorated in Pearl White with silver and black trim. It includes the racing number 53 and comes with the red, white and blue racing stripes, which run the whole length of the centre of the car. With authentic registration plate, OFP 857, the car is modelled with a left hand drive interior. The second release is also available in a deep ruby red.

The VW Beetle was an economy class car, which the German Volkswagen manufacturers introduced in 1938. It continued in production until 2003, during which time an incredible 21.5 million were made. Its familiar shape remained the same throughout its life.

Citroën 2CV Charleston Maroon/Black	NEW
76CT001	SCALE 1:76 PRICE £3.95

Citroën 2CV Charleston Maroon/Black

The new Oxford Citroën 2CV is a great addition to the range of 1:76 scale cars of the 1980s. It is decorated in one of the most distinctive colour schemes of the latest version of the cult car that first came onto the market in 1948. Introduced in 1981, only 5000 were made of the Charleston but it featured a lot of upgraded refinements including rear view mirror, chrome headlights and unique upholstery. It had a top speed of 71mph and 29 hp.

The Oxford 2CV Charleston, registration E773 TAG, is presented in maroon and black, with fine grey coach lines, silver trim and the inclusion of orange indicators and lights front and rear, as well as interior detail.

Renault Dauphine

The Renault Dauphine was a rear-engined economy car manufactured by Renault in one body style — a three-box, four-door sedan — as the successor to the Renault 4CV, with over two million examples marketed worldwide during its production from 1956-1967. Along with cars such as the Volkswagen Beetle, Morris Minor and Fiat 500, the Dauphine pioneered the modern continental economy car. In the United Kingdom, the Dauphine was one of the first imported cars to sell in large numbers, in a market formerly dominated by British manufacturers and local subsidiaries of American manufacturers.

Land Rover 88" - Hard Top Bertram Mills

This latest Oxford introduction on the Land Rover takes on the distinctive livery of Bertram Mills Circus. Founded by Bertram Wagstaff Mills, who was born in 1873, the circus soon became a household name. Known as the circus that went by train, perhaps some of the equipment was carried from the railway station to the circus field in a Land Rover similar to our latest model.

AEC Routemaster - Black Prince

Black Prince was founded as a coach hire firm in 1969 by Brian Crowther, a former employee of British Rail. The name was inspired by Edward, the Black Prince, a statue of whom stands in the centre of Leeds. In 1986 bus deregulation introduced on-road competition local bus service operation. Black Prince moved into scheduled service operation, launching a number of routes centred on Morley in competition with Yorkshire Rider. A variety of second-hand vehicles were acquired to operate the routes, and a livery of red and yellow introduced. By 2004, Black Prince operated a fleet of 40 vehicles on a network of routes around Leeds.
