

Freelance Web Designer

BELGIUM, KORTRIJK

What type of breed are we looking for?

You become physically unwell when seeing one design element styled differently throughout each page. You get the chills when experiencing an illogical onboarding flow. You recognize any of these symptoms? Great, keep on reading then.

We're looking for a Web Designer to join our Digital Squad and help us build digital products, experiences and solutions which look neat and fool proof, as well as fun and convenient to interact with. You know, something our users would like to come back to. Your aim is to improve the quality standard of the experiences we create; help us define what great work looks like, and subsequently show us the way.

What will be in your bowl?

- You will work within the Digital Squad together with the product owner and two developers. (You will need to be physically available in HQ in Kortrijk at least 3 days/week)
- We like to learn from feedback as soon as possible. Therefore we work in sprints using the Scrum method. During these sprints you will be responsible for the creation of prototypes to use in our user tests.
- Generate design documentation including components, user flows and prototypes
- Keep an eye on the overall design and UX of our webshop and detect where improvements can be made.
- Make sure the design throughout our webshop is consistent and aligned with our brand guidelines.
- You will problem solve complex design problems, iterate and test solutions.

Sounds like you? Give us a shout! Email CV + Portfolio/reference work to vincent@edgardcooper.com
