

Francis Okoth

Each portrait is an adventure exploring the unique character and personal strengths of my sister. A love of people and their traditional way is my focus. It is not about what you see but what you feel when you look at my paintings.

Nothing else has the power to capture the character and personality for ages. Being a portrait artist is about exploring the lyricism of the character and the dynamics of personality within the painted surface.

Apart from realism, I try different styles because I am not limited to one style. I paint portraits using different styles such as abstract, realism and mixed media. My goal as an artist is to explore the full range of my medium. I have developed several bodies of work exploring a variety of structures and subjects but the light and perfection keeps coming back into my work

My purpose as an artist is to find and celebrate the many ways humans overcome and grow as a result of this journey. We are all on a journey of survival to make the best of what we have.
