BEST EXOTIC AUTOS

No demand is too outrageous for EUROCAR (eurocaroc.com) owner Larry Sands and his team of auto aces. And Sands certainly knows a thing or two about grandeur: He opened for Led Zeppelin during his previous rock 'n' roll career and oversees luxury brands like Chrome Hearts Eyewear and Optical Shops of Aspen. For customers buying out of state, EUROCAR offers private flights or will deliver your Ferrari right to your door in every city in the United States. Living on a tropical island in a remote locale? No problem. There was even that time they agreed to dismantle a Lamborghini to accommodate a client's request to hang parts of the car as art throughout his manse in Irvine. Oh, and when you stop by the fully stocked Costa Mesa showroom, don't let its brilliant retail offerings—from stylish sunnies to rare timepieces—distract you from all the hot wheels that'll be begging for a spot in your driveway. A McLaren 570GT with dihedral doors, anyone?

BEST BAUBLES

For rings that ravish and diamonds that dazzle, head to Lido Marina Village's Broken English (brokenenglishjewelry.com). Opened last April by aesthete Laura Freedman, the curated boutique is dripping in vintage and contemporary fine jewels from beloved designers like Anita Ko, Jennifer Meyer and Anahita, with prices climbing up to $100,000-plus per piece. "[Newport is] such a beautiful, quaint little town, and I really thought [the village] needed a jewelry store," says Freedman, who recently debuted her own line of jewelry boxes and objets d'art. On our wish list: Anahita's 18K yellow gold Serpent cuff ($12,902) with a white South Sea pearl, tsavorite, gray sapphires and white diamond pavé, shown left.
