HOW TO PLAY

You're about to experience more than just a game. Whether you're looking to meet someone new or have fun with old friends, you're sure to enjoy exploring the human condition that connects us all and the experiences and beliefs that make us unique.

To begin, each player selects a 'stache style and takes both player hand cards. You will use these to make predictions about each other.

Sort the question cards (To Be Friends, To Be Playful, and To Be Dirty) into separate decks and shuffle them individually. The most adventurous player starts by drawing a card from any deck and reading one of the questions aloud.

Don't reveal the answer yet!

If the question requires a yes or no, players immediately lock in their prediction about the reader by holding their 'stache under their nose, keeping their prediction hidden. If the question requires an over or under prediction, the player who read the question must provide an incorrect answer before players lock in their predictions. This forces players to choose whether they think the actual number is over or under the wrong number.

Once all players are locked in, the reader says the correct answer, and all players reveal their predictions. Each player who predicted correctly earns a point.

Every question is reciprocal, so the reader now gets to make the same prediction about each player (using the same incorrect answer on an over or under question). Players should lock in their answers for themselves and reveal the answer after the reader makes a prediction about them. Afterward, tally the reader's points, discard the played card next to the deck it was drawn from, and have the person to the reader's left draw the next card.

Play continues until one of the following conditions are met:

- 1) Each person has been the reader a predetermined number of times,
- 2) All of the cards from a single deck have been depleted, or
- 3) You play as long as you want because you're an independent person who can make your own decisions.

Whatever you choose, I hope you enjoy playing as much as I do, and to find out, I've put together this preview of 54 of the 204 questions and 6 of the 12 'stache styles from the I Mustache U core set. If you'd like to stay updated on how you can get your own copy, you can join the mailing list at socialxg.com or connect at facebook.com/socialxg. In the meantime, I Mustache U to get out there, meet playful people, make your own memorable moments, and connect with one another through play.

I'll never forget cutting and laminating the first version of what has now become I Mustache U. It was a lot of work, but after playing that first night, we all knew this game was something special. I'm excited to be able to share that same experience with you.

Feel free to share this print and play with your own playful people. If you believe this game should be published for all to enjoy, consider asking others to join the community of playful people either through the mailing list at socialxg.com or the Facebook page at facebook.com/socialxg. Together, we can launch this game. Until then, stay playful!
