

Does Your Beauty Routine Need Decluttering? 15 Shelfie-Ready Products for Your Inner Minimalist

JANUARY 6, 2016 7:20 PM
by LAURA REGENSDORF

It's the time of year for a clean sweep—an occasion to weed through unwanted sweaters, undo the damage of wanton holiday feasting, and clear out bad juju. It's also a chance to reconsider your beauty routine with a double eye toward efficiency and aesthetics. As certain Japanese-style decluttering devotees might ask, are there unnecessary steps that slow you down in the morning or unsightly packaging that, quite simply, doesn't bring you joy? You might be due for a minimalist intervention.

Think of this restrained, black-and-white collection of products as both a palate and palette cleanser—a beauty arsenal, perhaps, for the sort of person who color-codes their design books on Vitsoe shelving and stocks up on monochromatic Proenza Schouler and Margiela at The Line. Here is just about everything you need, from a gentle sea-salt lip scrub to slough away winter chap to a face oil that doubles as your complexion-brightening retinol to a classic piece of Chanel (every bathroom needs one). Streamlining your routine might just buy you a few extra minutes at the gym or in bed asleep (both worthwhile resolutions), and the visual calm might well be the (#Shelfie) morning meditation you need.

---

2 / 15

---

Make Sea Salt Exfoliator & Marine Lip Repair duo, $40

makebeauty.com

Photo: Courtesy of makebeauty.com

Direct Link: <http://www.vogue.com/13384767/beauty-makeup-minimalist-packaging-design-new-year-fresh-start/>