Originally created in 1950 by Russell Spanner, the Lounge Chair with Arms has become a classic of Canadian Mid-Century Modern furniture design. Out of production for more than 50 years, Gus* worked closely with the Spanner family to revive this iconic chair, carefully matching the construction, materials, and design details to stay true to the original in every way. The seat is woven 100% cotton strapping, and the frame is solid birch with exposed bolts and finger-joint details. The Lounge Chair with Arms is built in Toronto and available in six finishes. To commemorate the return of this design classic, the first 100 chairs produced will be part of a numbered, limited edition series.
