How to care for your personalised wooden dog bowl Stand

Every personalised wooden dog bowl stand we create is finished with two coats of Osmo TopOil before leaving our Worcestershire workshop. However, no oil coating lasts forever, and we'd be doing you a disservice if we didn't share some of our secrets to help you get the most out of your dog bowl stand for years to come.

With that in mind, we've compiled a list of the steps you need to take to keep your dog bowl stand at its best, long after it leaves our workshop.

When do I re-apply oil?

Our initial coating should last for three to six months. After that, you'll be able to tell when another coat is due by observing whether your dog bowl stand is beginning to dry out or show signs of staining.

How do I oil my dog bowl stand?

In our opinion, Osmo TopOil is the best your dog bowl stand can get. It's a food safe oil that requires less coats and leaves a superior finish – that's why we've been relying on it for years. Alternatively, other food safe oils such as Butcher's Oil will work fine. As long as your choice of oil is clear, food grade and provides a matt finish it should do the trick.

Once you've got that sorted, here's our three-step guide to oiling your dog bowl stand properly:

Lightly sand your dog bowl stand with fine sandpaper (240 grit works best for us). This helps to lighten any staining and smoothens out any signs of wear and tear.

With a clean brush, apply a thin coat of oil to your dog bowl stand before leaving it to soak for ten minutes.

Use some kitchen towel to wipe off any excess oil, then simply put your dog bowl stand in a safe place to dry overnight.

How do I clean my dog bowl stand?

Cleaning your dog bowl stand is a very simple process. After each use, all you have to do is wipe it clean with warm soapy water, or if you want to really push the boat out you can use a light antibacterial cleanser, like Dettol. You'll also want to ensure it's fully dry before storage.

There are, however, a few don'ts.

Don't use harsh cleaners as they'll take the surface off.

Don't put your dog bowl stand in the dishwasher – it deserves better than that!

Don't submerge your dog bowl stand or leave it to soak in water.
