A Few of Our Favorite Things

It's the season for giving, and these products and services aim to do good in the global community.

Bobbysue's Sweet and Savory Original Nuts

Entertaining this holiday season? Your guests will go nuts for this salty-sweet mix of cashews, almonds and pecans from Bobbysue's. And you can feel good knowing a portion of the proceeds will help build a new animal shelter in Westchester County, New York.

$10/8 oz., bobbysuenuts.com

Ajiri Tea

A volunteer trip to western Kenya inspired Sara Holby to launch a tea company that employs locals for everything from harvesting the tea to creating the handmade packaging, with proceeds helping to cover school fees for children in the community.

Repurposed Messenger Bags

Coffee bean bags from Oregon's Hood River Coffee Co. get upcycled into oversized messenger totes that benefit the Las Mujeres Cooperativa—a group of female coffee roasters in rural Honduras.

Tree of Life Tray

Peruvian artisans give life to birds and tree limbs in this reverse-painted glass tray imported by fair trade-focused shop Ten Thousand Villages.

Miir Classic Water Bottle

Quench your thirst for both water and good works with this colorful, 20-ounce water bottle from Miir. A dollar from each bottle purchased affords one person in Africa clean water for an entire year.

Cocktail-Centric Paintings by Matt Talbert

Southern California-based artist and drinks enthusiast Matt Talbert paints stunning cocktail portraits (including Bitter Cube, shown here) and will donate 10 percent of proceeds collected on all his artwork throughout the holiday season to the Museum of the American Cocktail.
