A Few of Our Favorite Things

American Black Walnut Bowl

Made from repurposed, sustainably harvested black walnut, this Los Angeles-made elliptic bowl elevates a functional tabletop piece into a family heirloom.

$375, food52.com

DoubleKick Hot Sauce

Add a little pep to your next round of Bloody Marys with this pepper-packed, caffeinated hot sauce from Los Angeles foodie Ben Meyer.

$9, doublekicksauce.com

ChocoVivo Simply Chocolate Powder

Mexican cacao nibs meet unrefined cane sugar in this earthy chocolate powder from Culver City-based chocolatier ChocoVivo. Melt the powder into hot water for a mocha-ready chocolate syrup, or mix with warm milk and top with marshmallows for the ultimate cup of cocoa.

Salt & Straw Seasonal Pints Club

Los Angeles has 300-plus days of sun each year, making any day a good day for ice cream. Thanks to this seasonal pints subscription club from scoops shop Salt & Straw (its Los Angeles location opened last fall), pints of house flavors like Chocolate Goey Brownie, Stumptown Coffee, and Avocado and Strawberry Sherbet can always be in your freezer.

Starts at $65/month, saltandstraw.com

Writable Pennant Party Picks

Customize cocktail-party accoutrements with these flags from Los Angeles-based florist and designer Heirloom Design House.

$20 for 50 picks, food52.com

Bloom Avocado Honey

What started as a way to ensure pollination on his family's Southern California avocado ranch has bloomed into a full-blown business for David Jefferson of Bloom Honey. Heated just enough to ease it into the bottle, this single-varietal honey is raw and unpasteurized and offers the sweet suggestion of avocado in every spoonful.

$7.50/8 oz., bloomhoney.com

Post Studio Trays

Geometric graphics play tricks on the eye on this resin-coated, waterproof birchwood tray from South Pasadena-based design team Beth Duffy and Erik Kistel. Fill it with snacks and drinks for you and your friends.

$55, postispost.com
