I've had an Asian queen-sized mattress for the past six years, and it's served me well. However, my partner Arthur moved in last year, and, with him being two metres tall, his legs were dangling off my 190cm mattress! Sleeping on this mattress made his back progressively worse, and he's also a pilot, which puts even more stress on his back.

We started looking for a mattress that was over 200cm in length, and I began researching for custom-made mattresses, when European Bedding popped up on the internet. I contacted the general manager, Thijs, and he was so informative before we even visited the store in Tiong Bahru. He was never pushy and even encouraged us to try out another brand we had in mind.

We purchased a California king-size firm-density Heveya natural organic mattress, which is 213cm in length. This was the key factor in our purchase, as it had to be the right fit for Arthur. Rather than opting for a custom-made mattress, we decided to go with the California king as it was easier to get sheets for; also, we're going to be moving soon, and it will fit the new space better. It currently fits our bedroom perfectly, so we have no doubt it will look great in our new home, with more space.

From the first time we stepped into European Bedding's boutique store, we had good vibes about it. The team know the products well, and they offer a 100-day trial, which really sealed the deal for us. Buying a mattress is really a matter of sleeping on it for a longer period to truly know if it suits each individual.

We were looking for a good-quality large bed that had a unique feel and looked nice, as well as two bedside tables. I'd heard about Originals from friends, and also came across them during my online searches.

The last time we bought furniture for our bedroom was before our wedding, and our bed was literally falling apart! My son's bed was also in bad shape – broken, in fact! – so we actually ended up buying two beds and four bedside tables.

For our master room we wanted a timeless piece, but not classical or too dark, and something of good quality that would last. For my son, who is now 16, we were looking for a bed that would also last for a long time, and something he would be happy to take with him when he leaves. We've tended to wait too long before replacing furniture for our children, and in the end they've never had really nice bedrooms. Because we move every two to three years, we always say we'll buy new pieces once we move again; as I mentioned, though, the reality is that we've waited until our beds fall apart before buying new ones!

The beds fit well, which is important as our bedrooms are huge, and we are very happy with our new furniture. a
