THE BIG GOODBYE

On a special day in heaven, a long, long time ago
Jesus packed his suitcase for his trip to earth below.

“Clothes and towel, soap and comb,” he listed things he’d need.
Then Papa sauntered in and said, “ALL SET TO DO THE DEED?”

“You bet I am!” the Son exclaimed, then something caught his eyes.
He pulled a box of diapers from his suitcase in surprise.

“Very funny, Spirit!” Jesus shouted with a grin.
“I got you extra padding!” Spirit giggled, bouncing in.

"You're gonna be a baby! Just the cutest little tyke.
Crying, laughing, pooping—gasp! I wonder what that's like?"

"I'll tell you when I get there," Jesus said and rolled his eyes.
Then Papa laughed and stepped between. "ENOUGH OF THAT,
YOU GUYS."

"What did you think angels did?" Joph asked.

"I don't know," I admitted. "Like, sit on clouds and play harps all day."

Joph rolled his eyes. "Well, I do play a mean harp, but no. We are defending you, secretly and unseen, fighting against evil forces."

I scrunched my nose in confusion. "When? How? I never see any of that happen!"

"I know." Joph struck a karate pose. "We're like ninjas. With feathers."
