WHAT WE SHARE OVER TEA

Every year as we embark on this catalog, we inevitably look both forward and backward. This particular year, we have chosen as our theme “What We Share Over Tea,” because we have never before felt so engaged with our family, our employees, our growers, and our customers, all of whom we are also pleased to call our friends. This is despite the distance we were required to keep. To each of you we wish that this coming year will be easier than the last. We offer our thanks for the commitment you’ve made to our products and acknowledge the efforts it took to keep our business going thanks to your collective support. We are so grateful for the new friendships we have made and the strengthening of prior relationships. Quite simply, we could not have made it this far without you.

Even though we are separated by miles and by coronavirus and have therefore not been able to meet in person, we feel closer to you than ever. To the many of you who have joined us on social media, or who have written to us, this note from a customer, Aaron, echoes many we have received: “I, personally, would not be able to cope with staying home for so long without Harney and Sons tea.” Please continue to keep in touch, your thoughts and questions are welcome any time.

Tea warms, cools, comforts and connects. As we explored the things we share over tea, it became clear that tea is a universal balm, each cup a soothing gift of affection. We exchange stories, laughter, tears and much more when we share tea. We will share some of these in the next many pages and in our new podcast series also entitled “What We Share Over Tea.” We hope they will warm your heart and lift your spirits.

The whole Harney clan wishes each of you health, strength and as much joy as possible in the coming year. We raise our cups to you!

Mike Harney’s Tea Ratings

Mike Harney rates the majority of our teas according to three attributes. A rating of 0 means that the tea has none of that characteristic and a rating of 5 indicates that it is a primary characteristic.

Briskness refers to the tea’s ability to make your mouth pucker, also known as astringency.

Body refers to whether or not a tea feels thick in the mouth, such as Assam, or light such as a white tea.

Aroma refers to whether or not the tea has a pleasant smell, often the most prized attribute of a tea.

Visit Harney.com for Mike’s complete tasting notes and tips.
At Harney and Sons Fine Teas we have long been aware of the impact that any reduction of supply from the tea lands can have on our ability to produce our usual array of quality pure teas and blends. In India in 2021, the coronavirus has made life more complicated for everyone. Nonetheless, our friends and growers throughout the tea world are as dedicated as ever to growing and producing the finest quality teas. We encourage you to sample these notable pure teas because in so doing, you are helping an entire, valued, way of life to continue, through both good times and the less good times.

Okayti Golden Darjeeling
The golden tips are reminiscent of a great Assam from down in Brahmaputra valley. It has a nice body and sweetness. There are slight apricot notes. This is not a typical Darjeeling, but it is a very nice innovation. Briskness–2 Body–3 Aroma–2
Available Loose

Organic Darjeeling
A single-estate Darjeeling that varies from year to year depending on which producer offers the highest quality tea. While the body can be light, the aromas and flavors of bright red fruits and the sweetness of stone fruits reign supreme. Briskness–2 Body–2 Aroma–2
Available Loose

Poobong 2nd Flush
Located at the head of the Mirik Valley, Poobong is a high grown Darjeeling. Also the tea plants are well established and from the “China” jat, meaning the plants forbearers were from China. They have smaller leaves and more sophisticated flavor. This Second Flush has a mixture of light floral notes and a toasty flavor. Briskness–2 Body–2 Aroma–2
Available Loose

Darjeeling
High in the mountains, deep in the mists that surround the Himalayas is Darjeeling, “Queen of Teas.” Our Darjeeling tea is a blend of First Flush and Autumnal teas from the best gardens. A great value. Briskness–2 Body–2 Aroma–2
Available Loose, Sachets and Tea Bags

Ging 1st Flush
Ging is north of Darjeeling. Mike and Brigitte visited it back in 2016 and stayed at the bungalow which as been made into a little B&B, so you can visit also. This estate is owned by our friends in the Chamong Group. In comparison with the 2021 Namring 1st Flush, this Ging is a bit more mellow and the flavors are more like stewed tropical fruit rather than the more traditional grapefruit flavors we find in first flushes. Briskness–4 Body–2 Aroma–2
Available Loose

Namring Upper 1st Flush 2021
It was another challenging year in India. Our broker, Marcus, found this lovely tea from a tried and true garden: Namring. This comes from the Upper portion of the large garden. We visited the estate there a few years back and are pleased to see them rebounding. Briskness–3 Body–2 Aroma–2
Available Loose

See Yok 2021
One of the best teas in this year. It lives up to its description of being a Muscatel Style Darjeeling. The lovely fruit flavors come out. This happens when the plants are attacked by a bug and they produce a chemical to repel them. And we love that! Briskness–2 Body–2 Aroma–3

When Mike & Paul Harney became hemp farmers

When Mike and Paul Harney decided to make the jump from blending and selling tea, to growing, processing and selling hemp and CBD, it was a constant unfolding of learning experiences. And, by their account, involved continual laughter as they engaged in trial and error. Let’s tune in to a Mike and Paul stream of consciousness:

Mike:
Growing our own four acres of hemp was rewarding - our tiny seedlings grew into huge plants. We then dried the hemp flower from the previous year and incorporated it into a number of blends. The fact that we are a legacy tea company with 35 plus years in business was helpful, but not a slam dunk.

Paul:
Diving into the hemp field was more challenging than we ever imagined. Because there is a measure of hard physical work which tea growers may know about but as novice hemp farmers, Mike and I did not. Farming on our mother’s property in Connecticut meant breaking up land that hadn’t been farmed since about 1830. But each successive planting since the first in 2018 has become smoother and the outcomes have grown more satisfying.

Sharing knowledge of blending and brewing healthy beverages

Mike: It’s been slightly nuts, taking 11,000 hemp plants and creating a line of CBD and hemp teas in sachets along with effective ready-to-drink bottled beverages. The great thing is that our customers approve of what we’re doing - both flavor and effect. Especially during the coronavirus, interest in adaptogens, wellness and soothing or stimulating drinks from reliable growers and blenders seems to have been just what the market needed. And to keep things interesting, we’ve doubled our hemp plantings this year.

Paul: If you haven’t tried the products of our labors, make a point of it. Perhaps a little Chill or Calm tea before bedtime, or our blends with Hemp and Moringa to ensure a sound sleep. Treat yourself to one or more of the intriguing brews from The Hemp Division, backed by the Harney and Sons blending and flavoring skills. How much or how little CBD you would like, it’s up to you to Find Your Own Path. Like my brother and I, you are in for a unique experience!
In the Roaring 1920s, the expression “The Bee’s Knees” was synonymous with everything great; it was the Cat’s Pajamas! It seems only natural that you, our customers, should choose a 1920s-themed tea to celebrate the 2020s. Welcome to the winner of our 2020 Blend Contest - The Bee’s Knees. This Roaring Twenties-inspired tea, a play on the 1920's cocktail, will arouse your senses with its beautiful botanical aroma and silky smooth sweet cup.

The use of honey in the original The Bee’s Knees cocktail was a soothing addition of complexity and sweetness to complement the gin and lemon. In Harney & Sons Bee’s Knees, we’ve used white tea as a base, classic gin flavorings like (non-alcoholic) gin, juniper berries, honey and lemon peel and other natural flavors.

The cocktail namesake of The Bee’s Knees was attributed to Frank Meier, the bartender at the Hotel Ritz Paris. If you want to be truly daring, shake up the tea with a splash of gin and share a salute to the new Roaring Twenties!

Making beautiful tea
To make Harney & Sons’ beautiful teas into a delectable treat, attention must be paid to every detail. Of course the tea matters most, which is why we select full leaf teas from the finest tea gardens and estates. We care about the quality of our tea and we know our customers do too. A good pot of tea cannot be made from inferior tea. You need great tea!

Condition and freshness
Tea should be stored in sealed containers away from light in a cool place. Because tea picks up flavors and odors from foods around it, keep coffee and spices away from your tea. To ensure freshness, it’s important to rotate teas on your shelf or in your drawer.

Brewing the perfect cup
Heat your pot by filling it with boiling water. Recycle the water. Use one teaspoon, tea bag or tea sachet for each cup of tea required time and temperature. Once the steeping time is reached, remove tea, tea bag or sachet to achieve the perfect strength. Enjoy.

Fresh, pure water
If need be, water should be filtered. Hard water, sulphurous water or chlorinated water will affect the taste and color of your tea. The Chinese say that water is the mother of tea, so, like all mothers, treat her nicely.

When to use different teas

White Tea
Minimally processed, white teas are among the world’s rarest. Hand-plucked, unopened buds brew up into a subtle blend of sweetness and vegetal flavors. The best white teas are from Fujian province in China, and Sri Lanka.

Brewing
Brew white teas for 3 minutes in 175°F water. To achieve the perfect strength, remove the tea, tea bag, or sachet once your timer is up. Some white teas to enjoy are Chinese Silver Needle, Ceylon Vintage Silver Tips and Winter White Earl Grey.

Green Tea
Green teas are the most ancient of teas. Produced both in China and Japan, production methods vary but the focus is always to fix the green color. We’re happy to offer a stimulating selection of gorgeous, green teas.

Brewing
Heat your water to 175°F and steep for 3 minutes. Using a timer ensures your tea is not too strong. Some green teas also taste delicious in cooler temperatures – 140°F or even cold brewed. Try our Japanese Sencha, Lung Ching, and Tropical Green teas.

Oolong Tea
Partially oxidized, Oolong teas are in between green and black. They likely first appeared 300 years ago in China’s coastal Fujian province. If you are new to Oolongs, we recommend trying our T’ien Yin, Pancis‘ Formosa Oolong, or Milky Oolong varieties.

Brewing
For lighter, greener oolongs, stay on the lower temperature side. For darker, blacker oolongs, you can bring the water temperature higher, up to the boiling point. Steep both types of Oolong teas for 3-4 minutes, then remove tea, tea bag or sachet.

Black Tea
Black teas range from mellow teas from Assam, India. Black teas are withered, rolled, fully oxidized, and oven-fired which creates many warm, toasty flavors.

Brewing
Black teas should be brewed in 212°F water for 5 minutes. Once the steeping time is reached, remove tea, tea bag or sachet. If desired, serve your black tea with milk and sugar. Our English Breakfast, Scottish Morn, and Irish Breakfast teas are Harney black tea classics.

Herbal Tea
Whether you call them infusions, tisanes or “teas,” these exclusive brews and blends are made from roots, flowers, leaves, and seeds. Herbals have a long tradition in many cultures, and ours are delectable and caffeine free.

Brewing
Herbal teas should be brewed in 212°F water for 5 minutes. Once the steeping time is reached, remove tea, tea bag or sachet to achieve the perfect strength. To try something new, sip on our Yellow & Blue Tea, or Organic Roobos varieties.
We thank you for supporting artisan tea growers in this most difficult time.

Typically, Assam is one of the planet’s wettest places. Assam teas derive from a large-leaved variety of Camellia sinensis var. Assamica. It takes happily to the usually warm and wet, subtropical conditions in Assam. This year, however, has been different. There were weeks of brutal drought, followed by heavy rain. Although the First Flush was ruined, the second flush looks very promising and we’re excited to share the later harvest. Assam is the tea that Mike Harney enjoys to begin his day. We think you’ll enjoy the naturally sweet and toasty flavors, like toast spread with dark honey.

Mokalbari Golden Tips
A rare treat from Assam, it is comprised of nearly 100% golden tips. The Jalan family are the producers of this Mokalbari East, and they made the best Assams in 2021.

Mokalbari East
Over the years, we have found Mokalbari East to be a trusted tea producer. In fact, we do get our Assam Golden Tips from them. The Jalan family made Full Leaf (FGTFOF) that we chose to offer you when you need a more mellow Assam with the slight sweetness from the golden tips.

CTC Assam
Tea as the Indians drink it. Full-bodied with deep hues of brown and rich flavor. CTC Assam is a key ingredient in several of our blends. An “espresso-style” tea!

Organic Assam
This estate is located on the northern side of the Brahmaputra River in India. Organic gardens are rare in Assam. The teas generally do have the golden tips found on the best Assams. Without tips, the sweet honey flavors are missing.

Briskness: 3  Body: 3  Aroma: 1
Available Loose and in Sachets

Irish Breakfast
Our Irish Breakfast tea is 100% Assam, and like most traditional Irish blends, this is a great way to begin your morning. In contrast to other versions of Irish Breakfast tea, you could say ours is a little more sophisticated. It tastes great on its own or takes milk and sugar well.

Briskness: 2  Body: 4  Aroma: 2
Available Loose, in Sachets and Tea Bags

Halmari Broken (GFOP)
Halmari is this year’s broken Assam that brews up with strength and sophistication. We have been impressed with Halmari’s teas over the last few years.

Share the Traditional Wisdom of Ancient Japan

Japanese Buddhist monks brought tea plants and the tradition of grinding tea into a powder from China. In the 1600’s, Sen-no-Rikyu developed the Tea Ceremony as a rejection to the opulence found at the Emperor’s Palace in Kyoto. All the focus was on beauty of simpleness, including a great cup of powdered matcha tea.

Since then, multiple generations have studied the Art of Tea and passed their wisdom down.

Matcha Jobetsugi
Jobetsugi is a “thin matcha”, so it is a bit lighter in body than our Senjunomukashi, but still it is strong and bracing. Made from raw Tencha tea that is air dried, then dried flakes are ground between two stones resulting in a fine powder that is almost neon green.

As a tea importer, I have visited many farms. Most Japanese tea farmers try hard to make delicious teas. I must say that Matsuda does a great job. He tends his fields with such care. His tea leaves are noticeably bigger, juicier, greener and sweeter. And he makes his teas at his house, so they are truly an artisanal tea.

— MIKE HARNEY

Living amongst his tea fields, Matsuda considers the making of great tasting tea his life’s passion. One that he shares with you.

China is the original source of great teas. While they make many kinds of teas, green tea has been their choice for centuries. We choose several different types of green teas; some exquisite and some perhaps a bit more commonplace. Some represent the best of Spring teas: flavorful and full of mouth-filling body and sweetness, and others the toasty flavors of Summer: the evocatively named, Gunpowder.
Appreciation for a Slower Pace

Nothing like a good cup of Chinese black tea to slow you down and make you appreciate life. This makes sense, since the key to making great Chinese black tea is to slow the process down. They find ways to slow the conversion from green to black: chilling it, covering the leaves to reduce the interaction with oxygen, or adding moisture. And that time allows luscious flavors to develop. So do enjoy!

Anji Black
This special cultivar was found in the northern Zhejiang Province, and it has been a big hit ever since. People, including tea masters, wax enthusiastically about the great combination of flavors, sweetness, and body. Mike found it delicious and brought some back for your (and his) enjoyment. It is a stellar blend of mouth-filling and tongue-coating honey flavors. We think you will love it.

We have been working for some time to replace our nylon sachets with greener packaging that is better for the environment and for people. Sadly, COVID-19 threw a viral wrench in our progress. That’s why we are absolutely thrilled to report that we have three new sachet machines delivered, installed and up and running! Many thanks are owed to one intrepid Japanese salesman who was able to make this possible...

DOMO ARIGATO GOZAIMASU!

Our new sachet machines use only Neo Soilon material, which is a trade name for polylactic acid (PLA), a plant-based polymer that is derived from sugarcane fibers. For you science geeks, here’s how it’s made:

1. First, the raw natural material, such as sugarcane, undergoes wet milling, where the plant’s starch is isolated and separated.
2. Following this extraction, the starch is mixed and heated with enzymes and other chemicals to release dextrose (D-glucose), a type of sugar.
3. Then, the dextrose is fermented, producing lactic acid monomers, which polylactic acid is primarily made of (as you might be able to guess from the name).
4. The lactic acid is processed into PLA material by condensing the lactic acid into a lactide.
5. Then it is spun into a filament, which is woven into the material.

There are no petrochemicals and no genetically modified organisms (non-GMO) because the material comes from sugarcane! Big improvement. Also, since it is fermented, there is no sugar left from that cane, which means it is safe for all including diabetics.

Best News of All!

It can, at this point, be composted commercially, under strict conditions, not usually found in your home. We will work to make it easy to compost at home. And speaking of composting, any fiber that breaks apart is easily digested by your body.

We are accumulating the fabric and will roll it out soon.

The machines that used nylon will be converted when we run out of nylon later this year. This is a solid and exciting improvement from where we have been for the past 20 years. As we continue working toward making these easily compostable, please remember that we do offer loose tea for those who prefer not to use sachets or tea bags. In the meantime, cheers to progress!
Because 2020 was not a year of fanfare, it’s likely that the 150th birthday of The Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York City went largely unnoticed except by the most ardent of Met fans (as the museum is affectionately known). As part of that milestone birthday, The Met launched the reopening of their British Galleries. A big part of those galleries is tea, naturally. Because we have been assisting the cafés inside The Met for many years, we already had a relationship. It made perfect sense for them to reach out to us about creating commemorative tins and teas to celebrate the reopening of these amazing galleries.

Mike Harney commented, “From our perspective, this partnership is a perfect fit. First, The Met is one of the best museums in the world, and it is an honor to partner with them. My wife, Brigitte, has been a member for years, and we have been visiting the museum for decades. When it came to selecting the art that was used on the three tins, you likely won’t be surprised to learn that the folks at The Met had a lot to say on that topic, although I did give them the idea to have all the teapots on The Taste of British History. The Met executed the artwork and, I mean, who could second guess art from Cezanne and Monet? I love those French artists.”

These beautiful commemorative tins and delicious teas sell well at both The Met’s shops and on our website. It’s gratifying to know they feel the same as we do about this partnership. Our friend Morgan Pearce, Senior Manager of Marketing + Brand Partnerships at The Met, was kind enough to share this:

“The Met is proud to work with master tea blenders Harney & Sons. Our collaboration began in celebration of the Museum’s recently renovated British Galleries, which opened in 2020.” Morgan shared. “Harney’s expertise in the history of tea, and their exceptional quality made them an ideal partner to develop commemorative flavors that celebrates the art of tea and art in The Met collection.”

THE MET GIFT

We’ve partnered with the Metropolitan Museum of Art on this unique gift set which includes the art-inspired set of three tins, each filled with 20 sachets of a unique tea blend, and a Met Facade mug all packaged nicely in a co-branded black & gold gift box. The teas included are Garden Therapy Green Herbal Tea, Hot Apple Spice Black Tea, and “Taste of British History” Tea Blend, which was specially created in honor of the reopening of The Met’s renovated British Galleries in 2020. Beautifully gift boxed.

Garden Therapy Herbal Tea

Garden Therapy Herbal consists of chamomile, peppermint, and verbena, a blend that would’ve been perfect for Monet as he created scenic landscapes in the late 1800s. Telling Secrets Over a Cup of Oolong

There is something about oolongs. So much choice. Many different colors and wonderful flavors. The lightest of our oolongs is Wenshan Baozhong, very close to a green tea but distinctively oolong. At the opposite end of the scale is Formosa Oolong, the darkest and nearest to black tea. They will surely stir up a good conversation, and you can take it from there.

Ali San
Ali San is a high mountain tea from Taiwan and among the creamiest of oolongs. Now we all can appreciate the lovely lemony and creamy flavors of this lightly oxidized oolong.

White tea is the baby of the tea plant. For the bud is where white tea begins. Unlike green and black teas who draw their strength from mature leaves, white teas are the tiny tips. If they were not plucked, within a week they would be beautiful leaves, but no longer white tea. Consisting primarily of buds, white teas are among the tea world’s simplest, just air dried.

Inside Alex & Caitrin Harney's Tea Cabinet

Alexander and Caitrin Harney are a couple for whom “travel, food, cooking and music” are among their shared passions. Though they met at a coffee shop, tea and travel have played an essential role in their relationship ever since, from Alex’s surprise proposal at 18,000 feet in the Himalayas, to a trip to Korakundah tea estate in the Nilgiris in Southern India in 2013. Today, their list of shared loves is increased by two beautiful children: Korabelle, 4 ½, (named in honor of Korakundah) and Xavier, aka “Ziggy”, aged 1 ½. Alex and Cait have forged a life together that while appearing exceptionally busy, has, at its heart their recipe for a happy home, “lots of love and well-stocked kitchen.”

Demerara Sugar Cubes
Made from natural cane, demerara sugar boasts a beautiful golden hue and rich flavor unrivaled by traditional white sugar. Each of our demerara cubes adds just the right amount of sweetness to tea, coffee, or any other hot beverage in need of a little extra flavor. Each box contains 126 cubes

Yanagi Premium Green
Yanagi is a value-based alternative to some of the more costly greens, so you may enjoy Sencha flavors more often.

Kangra Kahwa
For over 8 years Alex Harney has been traveling to the Himalayas coaching ice hockey with The Hockey Foundation. After practices and games, Kahwa was served and enjoyed and this is our take on that experience. We used Kangra tea from the Himachal Pradesh region, which lends a unique taste as a base tea, and then added cinnamon, cardamom, cloves, safflowers, and almond flavor. This tea can be enjoyed as is, but for a more traditional experience, sweeten and serve with crushed almonds. 50% of sales go to support The Hockey Foundation’s programs.

Allens Scottish Shortbread - Celebration
Delightful handcrafted shortbread that was a favorite of our grandfather, John Harney, and they are just as much loved by his grandchildren and great grandchildren. This variety is flavored with Harney’s Celebration Tea.

RELATIONSHIP
AS PRACTICED BY ELYSE HARNEY AND ELYSE HARNEY MORRIS

In our popular podcast series “As the Tea Steeps,” Elyse Harney, Sr. explains that her successful real estate firm was a great support during the early years of Harney & Sons Fine Teas. Elyse Harney Real Estate (EHRE) was established in the family home in Salisbury, CT in 1987. It remains there today, occupying the front rooms of her beautiful historic Colonial home.

The company retains the charm of a small, local business while EHRE signs dot the landscape and the company now has four additional locations in Connecticut and across the border in Millerton, NY. Elyse Harney Morris, and her husband, Scott joined the firm years ago and are now also broker/owners. Elyse says, “In our family firm, friends become customers and customers become friends.” Find out more at harneyre.com
