Than Spending Time in the Water?

Summer is here and what better way to spend it than partaking in fun activities outdoors with your family! Of course, you, your family, and your friends will no doubt want to spend a lot of the time in the water to beat the summer heat. Not to mention, spending time in the water is therapeutic and a massive stress reliever.

Fishing

Fishing is always a blast for kids, especially if it's their first time, and it's even more fun when done on a boat. You can even spice things up a little by kayak fishing, or you could even create a game to make things more exciting! The more they fish the more they will love it!

Kayaking

You can never go wrong with kayaking. It's a family favorite, and there are kayaks of all sizes for children of all ages. The cool thing about kayaking is that it's relatively quick to pick up on, so if it's their first time, you won't have to worry, as they'll be learning how to navigate on their own in a matter of minutes.

Kayak Fishing

Kayaking and fishing are great activities to do out in the water, but combining them takes it to a whole other level. It might sound intimidating, especially if you've never gone kayaking before. However, it'll add a whole new twist on fishing.

Paddle Boarding

Stand-up paddleboarding has also become a summertime favorite for many families. Not only is it a great workout, as it helps you engage your core, thighs, back, and feet muscles, but it's also an easy sport that even kids as young as 4 years old can do! You can either teach your kid to paddleboard on their own or have them ride along with you on the same board.

Pedal Boating

Pedal boating is another way to have fun out in the water. Most campgrounds with lakes or even local parks have the option to rent them with or without the hour. Plus, depending on how old your children are, they can rent their own pedal boat and cruise on their own.

Skimboarding

If you're not sure what skimboarding is, it's a board sport that consists of gliding across the water's surface. As incredibly fun it is, it requires time, patience, and effort to get the coordination right. Yet, your children will be busy for hours if you decide to go skimboarding with them, so no worries about them getting bored quickly.

Boating

Boating is hands down the best way to spend time with your family out in the water. You can do lots of things on a boat and make a day out of it! You could start off with a nice picnic, fishing, swimming, or anything else you could think of.

Hiking

Usually, whenever you're camping near an ocean, river, or lake, there tend to be lots of neat hiking trails nearby. Plan ahead before your trip and locate any trails that you and your family might want to try. Hiking is a fantastic way to disconnect from the hectic everyday lifestyle and gives you the chance to be in touch with nature.

Jumping and Sliding into the Water

For those who have lived near a lake or have spent most of their summers camping near one, then you no doubt have jumped off a dock or boat and splashed into the water. People have been enjoying this for as long as we can remember, and it's definitely a crowd-pleaser. As simple as it is, it's an activity that never gets old or boring.

Spend Time Out in the Water!

Spending time out in the water doesn't mean just going for a swim. Include these fun and diverse activities in your summer plans, and you'll have the best outdoor fun!
