A visit to a typical Singaporean home over delicious dinner/supper experience, one can learn about the history of the neighbourhood and taste the richness of home cook clay pot curry and relishes served from stove to table in terracotta pots in a style reminiscent of these kilns of old. Also, accompanying these fragrant dishes are local favourites like roti prata (flatbread) and pulut hitam (black glutinous rice).

Twenty years ago, this couple grew up in the neighbourhood of Hwi Yoh Green Estate in Serangoon North. The area was filled with kilns making terracotta pots and people would often use the pots to cook their meals as the dishes would have some sort of magical flavours which taste richer and flavourful.

About The Host

Rose and Chris, an interracial (Indian and Chinese) couple with an eclectic range of interests between them came together with the idea of being host to guests delivering authentic home cook food.

The Experience

This would be a unique and once in a lifetime experience. Having the chance to taste delicious Singapore dishes passed on from their grandparents' generation as well as gaining more knowledge about the culture and lifestyle of a Singaporean couple.
