JLG

I feel so lucky to do what I do.

I spend my days with rare and beautiful gems, conjuring up new designs and working in gold, the most ancient of metals.

My new showroom continues to bring great pleasure to all. Every week I am visited by wonderful clients to view my collection.

My Paraiba tourmaline gems are always a source of fascination for all. People are entranced by their colour and iridescence. While they are increasingly hard to source, and I do not always know where I will find the next ones, I have made some very special new pieces which are featured in this brochure.

Enjoy.

PARAIBA TOURMALINE

I find that of all my rare and precious gemstones, Paraiba tourmaline is the one that makes people stop in their tracks.

Gazing upon the electric blue hue of Paraiba tourmaline stones for the first time inspires awe in even the most seasoned jewellery collector.

Often likened to the colour of a tropical sea, this extraordinary gemstone is a rare and unique beauty with an iridescence like no other.

BESPOKE

Bespoke commissions are a large part of my work, I so enjoy the whole process. Commissioning a piece of jewellery is an intensely personal experience. With forty years experience, I have the ability to interpret what clients really want, as well as the skill to produce a stunning piece that will become a future heirloom.

Above is an example of two pieces created with old-cut diamonds taken from an heirloom brooch that was no longer worn. The diamonds have been re-purposed into this beautiful necklace and earrings. This is a fine example showing how multiple pieces can spring from one single piece.

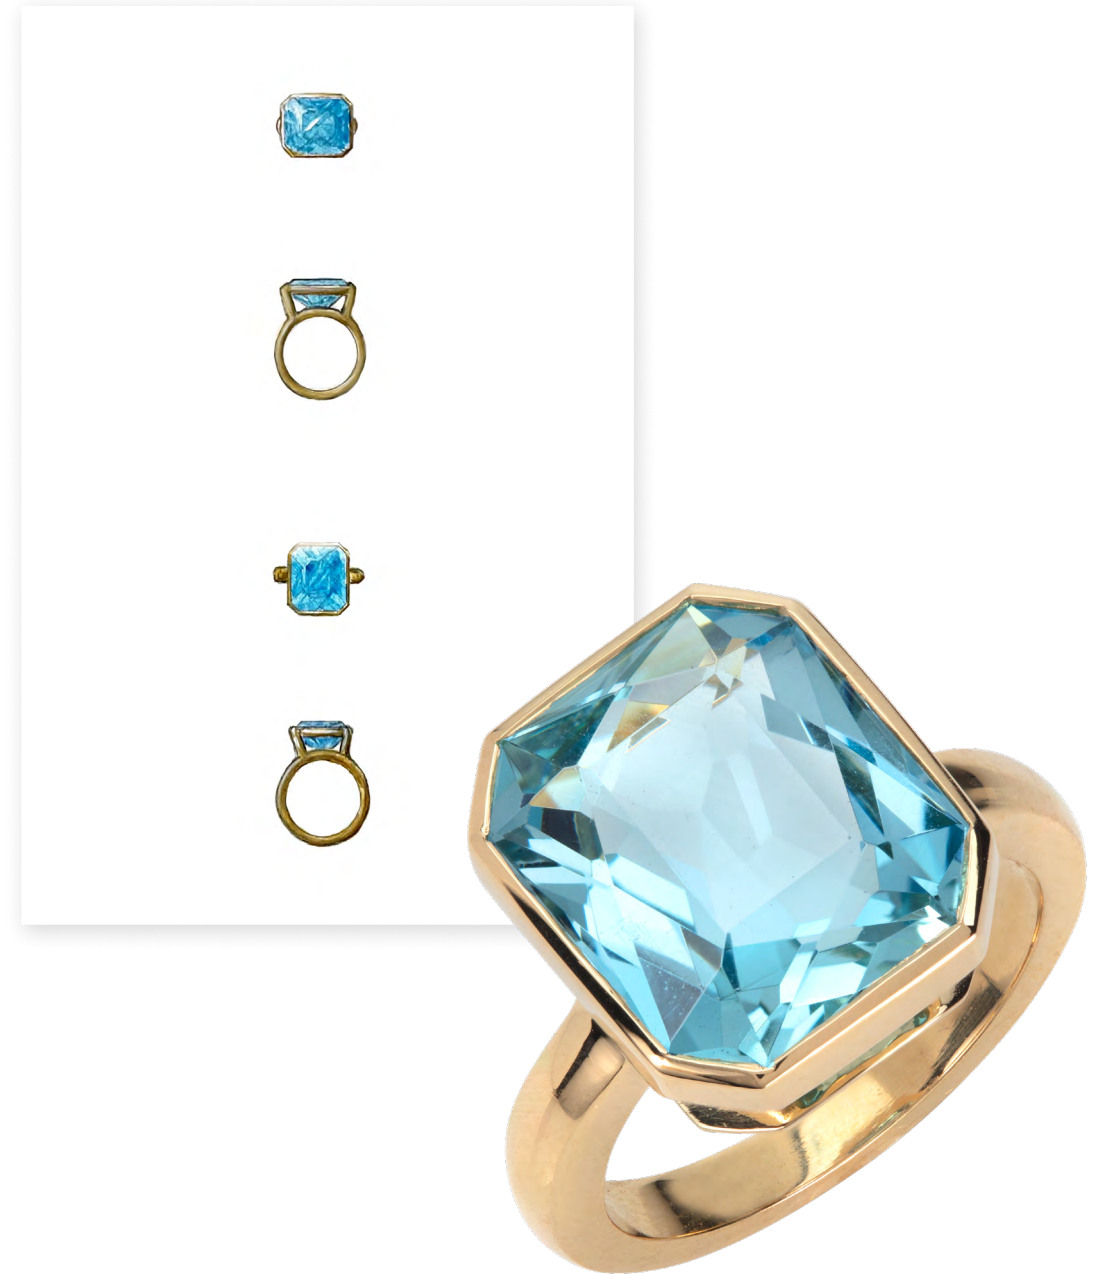

This bespoke engagement ring is set with a large oval emerald and two exceptional oval-cut diamonds which I sourced for my clients. They had been inspired by my Paraiba tourmaline and diamond three stone ring (p.28), so we set these stones in the same style, in my signature beaten texture 18 carat yellow gold. The richness of the gold works so well with both the emeralds and the diamonds, and provides the 'wow' factor.

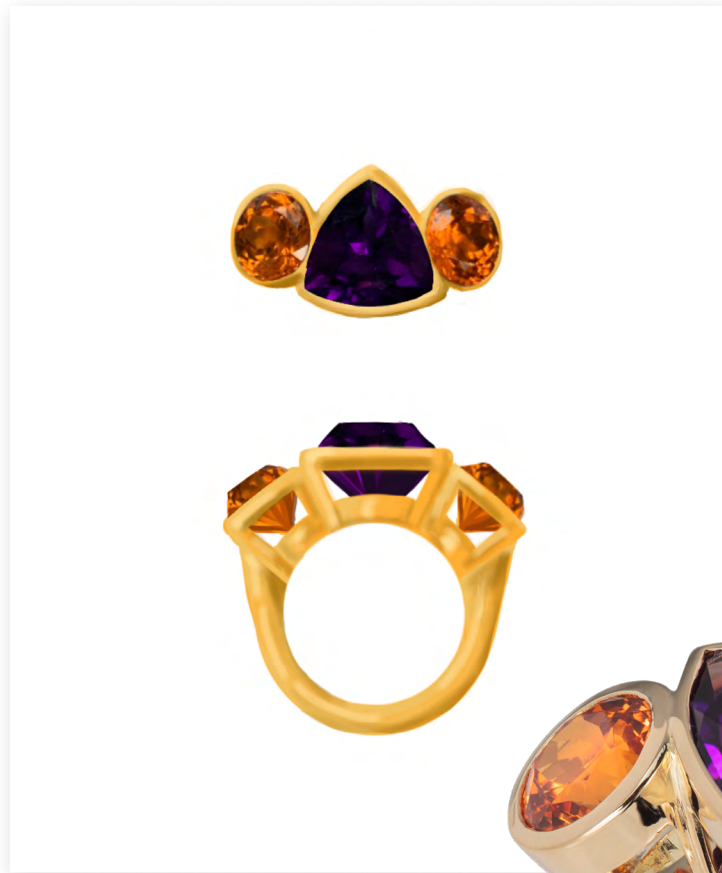

A bespoke triple-band eternity ring. A traditional hinged ring with the option to choose your own stones. The central band is 18 carat yellow gold set with square princess-cut yellow and blue sapphires, which I sourced from abroad to get the finest quality.

The two outer bands flip up, and are made in 18 carat white gold and set with brilliant-cut diamonds. This ring was a challenge to make, and especially to set the stones in this style, which makes the process time consuming but so wonderful to see it in completion.

This is a ring with a very fine quality, large aquamarine. I have set the stone very simply in 18 carat yellow gold. I always say 'simplicity is best' when you have a stone of this quality, so I carefully designed the setting to be as minimal as possible, allowing the focus to be on this unique stone.

This very large bespoke ring was a challenge to make because of its size. The client came to me with the trillion amethyst and two Mandarin garnets, and we created this impressive ring in my signature three stone ring style. It is such a statement ring with this fantastic colour combination.

My client was given this unique, very large turquoise cabochon many years ago. It is one of the old Persian turquoise stones that you don't often see today. I mounted it with a simple double edge setting in 18 carat yellow gold, which gives it an ancient, timeless feel.
