

Gracy's Tips

- You can re-flower your Hyacinths, but forced Hyacinths won't do as well. Cut off the flower when it browns. Lift your bulbs only after all the foliage has yellowed and store in a cool, dry place!
- Pre-chilled bulbs (8 weeks in the fridge) grown indoors will flower much earlier than outdoor planted Hyacinths. Grow them in a bulb glass or in well-drained pots with a good potting mix!

General info

Hyacinths are among the most sweetly scented of the spring flowers, and they're available in more colours than you would ever have believed! They make wonderful container plants and can be grown indoors in good light. As bedding plants, they make a great edging or plant for walkways and entrances. Did you know that you can get yellow, red, and even near-black Hyacinths? You can also get rare varieties with double florets.

A few planting basics

The Dutch growers who got your bulb to peak flowering size have taken care to give you bulbs that are ready to produce their best flowers. All they need from you is a sunny or lightly shaded position and well-drained soil. Improve your soil with lots of well-rotted compost or choose a freely draining potting medium.

Planting instructions

- Plant in early Autumn for spring flowers or force indoors for early blooms
- Cover the top of the bulb to about 10cm
- Space them around 7.5cm apart
- The pointy end of the bulb must face upwards
- Water well after planting and mulch
