

Window Planter Boxes

The window planter box from Australianwoodsmith issue 124 was designed around a 915mm-long, heavy-duty plastic liner. Since there are other liner sizes available (762mm and 610mm), it seemed only natural to make a set of planter boxes to go with them. The upper right photo shows how the three sizes relate. The bottom planter box is the 915mm size featured in the magazine.

610mm PLANTER BOX

As you would imagine, the construction process to make the smaller planter boxes is identical to the original version. What's different is the length of the front and back pieces for each frame. Then, in order to keep the spacing between the slats the same as the others, the final width of the corner slats on the front and back differs slightly. Here again, you can use the same taper sled to cut them to size.

762mm PLANTER BOX

For the planter box that's designed to hold a 762mm plastic liner (lower right photo), you'll need a few more slats than the 610mm version. Take a look at the drawing below to see the width for the front and back corner slats. The drawing also shows the lengths for the front and back pieces of the upper and lower frames.
