Find that what's old is new again with the current trend in engagement rings that is changing the game.

BEYONCE STOLE THE WORDS RIGHT OUT OF our mouths when she said “This rock, flawless,” and in terms of the selection at San Francisco’s 66Mint, this statement on point. More than ever, the romance of estate jewelry becomes a coveted alternative to modern ornamentation. Marcus and Joseph Chait, the father-son founders of 66Mint are the providers of joy and integrity as they give those investing in the splendor a memorable experience that will last as long as the diamonds on hand.

Names such as Cartier, Tiffany & Co., and Bvlgari, illuminate the showroom – yet what does one really want out of an engagement ring? Some bling of course, maybe an eye-catching rock, and as it turns out, heritage. With the current influx of lovebirds investing in estate jewelry 66Mint becomes the most sought-after destination. Settled in to the ever-stylish Mint Plaza, with 100 years of history on its trail, the luxury curators keep an extensive collection of stunning adornments at all times.

“It has been extremely gratifying to see the public’s response as they’ve discovered the beauty and value of our estate jewelry collection, and we are equally thrilled with how 66mint has expanded our ability to purchase jewelry from clients in the Bay Area and beyond.” avers Joseph Chait.

As the act of putting a ring on it seems to be getting an antique revamp the company goes as far as to customize the specialty pieces at shoppers’ request. The joy doesn’t end with just diamonds but expands to timepieces, to precious stones one can’t live without, the brand elaborates the possibilities of what high-end jewelry entails. Yes, this is a story with a happy ending between you and your object of desire, and 66Mint is the knight in shining armor.
