Arctic Cat Brake Lever

(1) Loosen off the torx pivot bolt on the stock brake lever, but do not remove it yet from the assembly.

(2) Using a strong piece of tape, slide it between where the brake lever contacts the piston in the master cylinder to hold the piston from falling out when you remove the lever. Make sure the tape is pulled tight and fastened well against the master cylinder.

(3) Slide the pivot bolt out from the assembly and remove the rubber boot and brake lever.

(4) With the brake lever off, cut the small retaining clip holding the park brake assembly together on the lever.

(5) Remove the pin from the park brake assembly, being careful not lose the spring when you take it apart.

(6) Assemble the park brake lever and spring on to the Munster brake lever with the handle of the red park brake lever facing the logo side of the Munster brake lever, and the spring on the opposite side as shown in the picture. Make sure one end of the spring is inserted in the small hole of the red lever and the other end is bracing against the brake lever. Slide the pin in from the top down through both levers and spring.

(7) Locate the small retaining clip included with the Munster brake lever. Slide the clip firmly over the end of the pin to hold the park brake assembly in place.

(8) Slide the rubber boot on to the brake lever and install the lever on to the brake assembly. Install and tighten the pivot bolt, and remove the tape you applied earlier holding the piston in the master cylinder.

(9) Loosen the master cylinder clamp bolts and position the brake assembly for rider preference. Re-tighten clamp bolts. Apply and release the brake several times, as well as test the park brake to make sure everything is functioning properly. If the brake feels spongy and/or the piston in the master cylinder leaked or fell out at any point during the install, the brakes will need to be bled to insure no air is in the brake lines. Refer to your owner's manual for this procedure.
