

KLEAN KANTEEN USE, MAINTENANCE & WARRANTY:

WASHING YOUR BOTTLES, CUPS, CANISTERS AND CAPS:

- The Classic and Wide-mouth bottles (in Brushed Stainless finish) are dishwasher safe. As are the pint cup and single-wall food canisters.
- Klean Kanteen recommends handwashing painted and all vacuum insulated bottles, vacuum insulated tumblers and vacuum-insulated canisters.
- For thorough cleaning, you can use warm, soapy water and a bottle brush. Klean Kanteen also recommends an old-fashioned cleaner: mixing water and baking soda making a nice thick paste.
- If your bottle or cap seems to be retaining flavors or smells, use diluted vinegar and soak them in it overnight. NOTE: The Stainless Unibody Bamboo Cap should not be soaked or immersed.
- All Kid Kanteen and Classic caps (except the Stainless Unibody Bamboo Caps) and all Wide caps are dishwasher safe. The Café Cap is dishwasher safe and the rotating piece on the top also pops out for thorough cleaning.
- The original Stainless Loop and Flat Caps must be hand washed because they were constructed with two materials: stainless steel (threads) and polypropylene (top), because of such they must be hand washed to ensure that water doesn't work itself into the stainless cavity.

PROTECTING THE PAINT ON PAINTED BOTTLES:

When Klean Kanteen debuted the painted bottles, the most important thing to Klean Kanteen® was to find a safe and durable paint that also looked dynamite. We reviewed and tested dozens of different paints and selected an acrylic paint that contains no toxins or lead. Just like anything that's painted, it is possible to chip or scratch the paint on your Klean Kanteen. To prolong the life of your paint, hand wash your bottle and don't use abrasive agents to clean it.

PAINTED KANTEENS WITH KIDS OR TODDLERS:

Klean Kanteen have also heard from some parents that their child has chewed on a painted bottle and ingested some of the paint. If this happens, don't worry, the paint is perfectly safe. Though our paint is safe, we recommend our stainless steel finish bottles for small children who like to chew on things.
