

MATHILDE FABRY & VIRGINIE PERUCAUD

Sully is Afraid of the Dark

Sully is Afraid of the Dark

TEXT BY VIRGINIE PERUCAUD
ILLUSTRATIONS BY MATHILDE FABRY

Night is coming, Sully the owl has to go to bed.
Even though he knows it is time to sleep, he can not.
During the day, the forest is full of wonders: his parents, his friends, his toys; whereas the night is dark, full of noises and unknown.
He might be scared, he may feel a little lonely,
and time might seem a little too long ...
He is so eager for morning to come that he starts to cry.

WHAT IS GOING ON ?
WHY ARE YOU SO SAD?

Sully is very happy to hear someone, it reassures him in all this dark. He suddenly realizes that it is not so dark: there is a little light shining above him. A light sweet and serene, a light coming from a crescent in the sky, who looks so cozy and warm.

It's the Moon speaking and reassuring him:

"Everyone needs to sleep during the night, so I watch over them.

*You do not need to be afraid in the dark, I'm here to illuminate you.
You are not alone at night, I'm here with you.*

You will never be bored with me, I will change my shape every night for your amusement."

Sully just made a friend for life.

Sully can now lie down serenely and be lulled by her waiting to see momy and dady in the morning.

He wraps himself in his right wing, all warm.

He wraps himself in his left wing, all cozy.

The moon sends him a sweet light kiss on the tip of the beak.

Everything is now perfect, he can peacefully fall asleep.

Find Sully the owl, the Moon and their many friends on www.petitloulou.com