Spring Clean With These Sustainable, All Natural Household Cleaning Products

How clean are your cleaning products?

Spring has officially sprung, and it has many of us gearing up for an annual deep clean. While the aftermath of a good household clean is always good for the soul, it's not always great for your health or for the environment. Conventional cleaning products often contain toxic chemicals associated with skin and respiratory irritation, and other health issues. Plus, the majority are packaged in single use plastics, which aren't doing the environment any favours.

To make your transition towards a more sustainable home easier, we've rounded up our favourite natural, eco-friendly cleaning products. From chic packaging to beautiful botanical scents, these products make cleaning cool again.

1. Cove Cleaning

Prioritising sustainability, Cove Cleaning encourages consumers to rethink how we use products. Rather than packaging with single use in mind, Cove Cleaning products come in refillable aluminium bottles that are designed to be kept forever. After your first purchase, you can stock up on refillable pouches; a system designed to reduce wastage. The formulas themselves are vegan and non-toxic, featuring fresh, natural scents like mint, lemon, and eucalyptus.

2. Koala Eco

Developed in collaboration with an organic chemist, Koala Eco products harness the power of native Australian botanicals to rid your spaces of germs and bacteria. With a full suite of non-toxic, biodegradable cleaning products including laundry liquid, dish soap, room spray, bathroom cleaner, and floor cleaner featuring natural essential oils like tea tree, eucalyptus, lemon myrtle, and peppermint, Koala Eco products leave your home smelling beautiful.
