When we bring you our product round-ups, particularly those heralding sustainable brands, it is with the sincere desire to introduce you to an option that might be a better one than what you're already consuming. And certainly with no intention of encouraging everyone to buy more than what they need.

Less is more when it comes to buying for sustainability. However, if you are indeed in the market to shop more sustainably for the home, there are some brands that offer more sustainable choices than others. From refillable packing to biodegradable formulas, (and in honour of Earth Day) these are some of the most sustainable and eco-friendly home cleaning products on the market.

Koala Eco

Luxuriously scented with natural Australian botanicals, Koala Eco is another favourite. The laundry wash in particular has a glorious lemon eucalyptus smells that is terribly comforting. Although these are liquid products and packaged in plastic, all the bottles are made from recycled waste and the ingredients are sustainably sourced. There is the option to buy glass display bottles which you can refill, so you don't have to have the large plastic refill bottles on display. Performance wise, this is one of the better sustainable brands. It's also one of the most luxurious.
