DADOquartz — the natural choice for your designer bathroom

GLOBAL warming, recycling, natural resources and carbon footprint — Australians are becoming more conscious of their impact on the environment. Therefore, current trends relate to the environment.

The emphasis is on the organic look of the bathroom. Natural materials have the look but often not the durability or convenience of use demanded by modern living. DADOquartz is an engineered stone that has the look and feel of the original material and yet has the properties created by engineering. It is possible to use engineered stone that is indistinguishable from the original, but superior in virtually all respects.

Consider bathroomware from engineered quartz or marble. DADOquartz bathware is being hailed as the new granite thanks to its scratch-, heat-, mildew- and mould-resistant qualities. It also doesn't hurt to know that it's easy to clean and boasts an elegant satin finish, which is silky smooth to touch. Another drawcard of DADOquartz is its ability to retain water temperature, permitting long and relaxing soaks. DADOquartz is perfect for homeowners wanting a product that's stylish and durable with a soft, natural look.

It is so easy to get a serene feeling in your bathroom. The designer bathroom is planned in conjunction with the main bedroom, dressing room and private garden. This gives a feeling of continuity. With the emphasis on nature, it will add to the feeling of rest and relaxation. DADOquartz has the organic feel and look of natural stone, but the properties of engineered stone.

DADOquartz cleverly combines the advantages of granite and polymer products. State-of-the-art manufacturing technology ensures a void-free material, which has no fissures, veins or other imperfections that could compromise its strength or appearance. It is cleaner, safer, sturdier and more consistent than natural stone. In its application as bathware, DADOquartz becomes uniquely appealing — your bathroom deserves it and so do you.

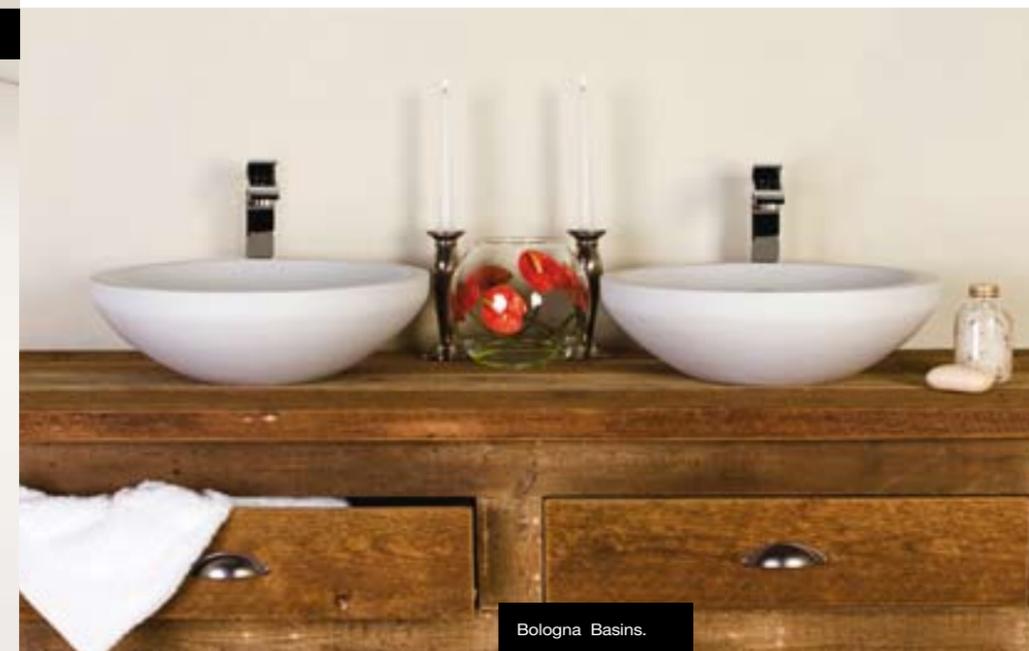

Freestanding bathtubs are a current trend in Italian bathware. The material of which DADOquartz is manufactured is the same material as the well-known quartz kitchen tops in another shape. DADOquartz has been recognised by the leaders of designer bathware and was exhibited in 2009 for the fourth consecutive year on the well-known Cersaie show in Bologna, Italy. In 2008 and 2009, the DADOquartz products had been seen on the IdéoBain show in Paris, France; Ish show in Germany; Woonbeurs show in Netherlands; and Decorex in South Africa. DADOquartz has been seen at DesignEX

2008 in Brisbane and in 2009 at Indesign in Sydney.
