BE DISTRACTING!

Our Be Distracting! design is inspired by the courageous Zulhaika Patel. The 13 year old South African protested against her school when they said her afro was too distracting. Her protest forced the school to change its policy. Empower girls to stand up for who they are and what they believe in!

OUR STORY

3 is the magic number. We are three friends - Tina, Patti and Rikke. One of us is Black, and the other two are white. One of us is Danish and the other two are American. We are all moms and we all like coffee. Together we make up Brown Crayons.

We created Brown Crayons when we saw there were no t-shirts with images that truly reflected who our beautiful, brown daughters are or who they could be - strong, powerful and authentic. So we began by making some t-shirts and have since expanded into notecards and other products. We decided we would be the change we were waiting for. What we have discovered is that Brown Crayons is a vehicle for change even within ourselves. As we grow and learn, so does Brown Crayons. And there is always more work to be done.

As a multiracial company attempting to shift the narrative away from white being the default, we have always needed to have open, trusting, blunt and intense conversations regarding race. They can be uncomfortable but we have them so we can work together in creating and putting out images of strong, quirky, brown girls. We believe that representation matters. We have seen how powerful it can be when people see their images reflected back at them.
