Pasture Management

As the pasture dries off, we need to look out for certain hazards in the paddock. Long grass that wasn't grazed during the cooler months will often contain toxins in the dried seed heads.

These can cause many conditions in horses, such as grass staggers, allergies, compromised immune system, kidney damage, and gut dysbiosis.

It is time to dead head these paddocks. Slashing them or grazing cattle or sheep over the paddock is a good way to rejuvenate.

Take the paddock down to about 4cm - 5 cm then allow the paddock to come back to about 7cm- 10 cm before grazing with horses.

The perfect length for horses to graze is between 7cm - 15 cm It is a good time to give a Detox treatment.
