PLEIN AIR

"Plein air" is a French term used by painters in the 19th century (and since) to describe painting done outside on location instead of in the studio. A less common term sometimes used in English for paintings done outdoors is "alfresco," but in Italian it apparently has different meanings, including "to be in the cooler" (in jail).

The Impressionists believed in the merits of painting en plein air, and much of their work was done outdoors. Originally a French movement, plein air painting quickly spread to the rest of Europe, America and Asia.

Among the many famous 19th century painters who painted extensively outdoors before and after the Impressionists are Constable, Turner, Corot, Manet, Cezanne, Gauguin, VanGogh, Whistler and Sargent.

Mary Cassatt, Georgia O'Keefe, Edward Hopper, Rockwell Kent, Fairfield Porter, Alex Katz and Wolf Kahn are a few examples of the many 20th century painters whose work continued to be influenced by plein air practice and tradition.

PAINTING LARGER AND SMALLER WITH YOUR POCHADE BOX

Adapters (pg. 35)

Use with: Pocket Box™, Thumbbox™, Cigar Box™ or Guerrilla Box™

What it does: Allows you to paint smaller and carry the paintings in the lid.

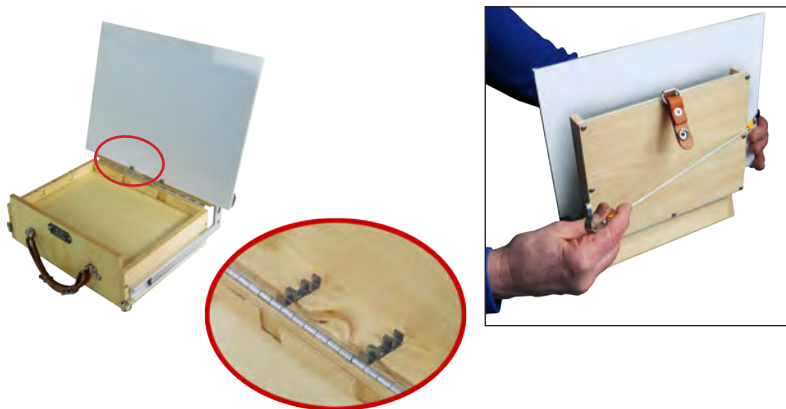

How it works: The Adapters hold two wet panels back to back. Each Adapter can nestle inside the next size up so you can paint even smaller. Can also be used with wet painting carriers.

Lid Extension Clips (pg. 40)

Now included with: Pocket Box™, ThumbBox™, Cigar Box™, and Guerrilla Box™

What it does: Allows you to paint larger

How it works: The Panel Adapter Extension Clips hold your panel out in front of the lid (also will hold extra panels back to back inside the lid). Extends in front of the bottom edge of the open lid. Use with the panel tie down straps (pg 47) for larger panels (above right).

GUERRILLA CARTÓN™ V2.0

Guerrilla Painter
Cartón Board V2.0

"Stonewal Creek"
by Carl Judson © 1994
Oil on Cartón™, 6x8

Post-impressionist painters like Toulouse-Lautrec and Eduard Vuillard used tan card stock for oil painting. Guerrilla Cartón™ is a thin resin-sized card stock that is far more permanent than that used by those famous painters. Think of Guerrilla Cartón™ as a super-thin (1/32") "Masonite"- but with a twist. The fibers are impregnated with a resin that keeps the board from warping when it gets wet. The resin also protects the fibers from the deleterious effects of oils.

"I've been painting on this surface for more than 20 years and it has held up very well. After being taped to the roof of my greenhouse for a year, it showed some slight fading - ending up about 10% lighter in shade."

Carl

Guerrilla Cartón™ with its warm tan color makes a wonderfully sympathetic surface for oil, acrylic or pastel paintings. It is possible to paint directly on it, but many oil and acrylic painters use a coat of clear acrylic gesso or matte gel medium to make this surface a little less absorbent.

One nifty property of Guerrilla Cartón™ is that it does not buckle when wet, so it is possible to prime with gesso or gel mediums and it still lays flat. Very lightweight and compact, good for use while traveling. Take advantage of these thin, light-weight panels in the field and then use acrylic medium or some similar adhesive to mount your finished paintings on Museum Board, Masonite or Gatorfoam before framing.

Guerrilla Plein Air Cartón™

Tan color. 1/32" thick.

Where's Carl Now?	43

The GUERRILLA PAINTER Story by Carl Judson

I was managing a cattle ranch in Colorado when I took up plein air painting back in the early 80s. I had come across Winston Churchill's essay, "Painting as a Pastime" in which he prescribes painting as therapy for stress and overwork. Since I was stressed and overworked, and Churchill is a pretty good persuader, I took to painting.

No sooner had I taken up my newfound pastime than it dawned on me that the last thing I wanted was to have one of my cowboys catch me in the act. Fortunately, I came across a little book that had some illustrations of a small portable painting rig, called a pochade box. Now that was the ticket!

So I made one small enough to hide under my pickup seat. It was as cute as a bug's ear and worked great – none of the ranch hands found out my secret.

By the time I coined the term "guerrilla painter" I had been doing volunteer rural development work in Central and South America for several years. In my spare time I had been sneaking around with my homemade pochade boxes, capturing the unsuspecting world around me in little oil paintings. It was only a matter of time before I began thinking of myself as a guerrilla painter. One thing led to another and before I knew it, my son, Arthur and I had started the company that makes the popular Guerrilla Painter® Pochade Boxes.

Today, Guerrilla Painter is the leading manufacturer of products for artists who travel and paint out of the studio.

WHERE'S CARL Now?

Carl Judson, the original Guerrilla Painter, has been on the road, visiting plein air events, old and new friends, artists groups, and painting. Outfitted with his sleek new studio ride (dubbed Moby Van), he's able to take his dog-and-pony show on the road.

He'll be continuing his road trips in the coming year, and would love the opportunity to meet with more artists and groups. His schedule is fairly flexible so you can flag him down for a cup of coffee or a meet'n greet with fellow painters.
