

Eternal Impact Leader Guide

Introduction

This leader guide provides guidance for conducting a seven-session, small-group study of Eternal Impact: The Passion of Kingdom-Centered Communities Workbook, a companion study to Eternal Impact: The Passion of Kingdom-Centered Communities by Ken Hemphill. You will need both of these resources to lead the study.

Using the DVD

Each of the seven sessions includes a DVD segment featuring Ken Hemphill teaching a portion of that session. The best way to study each week is to view the DVD segment at the point designated in the Group Study outline in the learner devotional guide.

Accessing Other Resources

Online, in addition to this leader guide, you'll find listening sheets for the video segments, an administrative guide with ideas for planning promotion, in-home studies, prayer groups, sermons, etc.

Using the Member Book

Participants will need the member book Eternal Impact: The Passion of Kingdom-Centered Communities Workbook. They would also benefit from reading and studying Eternal Impact: The Passion of Kingdom-Centered Communities by Ken Hemphill. The two books complement each other, although they do not contain the same content.

Each week's material in the member book uses the following format--

Small-group guide. These two pages provide a small-group guide for learners. These pages form the outline for the sessions you will lead. Sessions will be outlined below.

Each session begins with questions to get the group to think and interact about that week's topic. You can direct learners to discuss the questions as a group or in twos or threes. Or they may think about the questions and write their answers. Subhead topics correspond to the chapters of the book Eternal Impact: The Passion of Kingdom-Centered Communities by Ken Hemphill. The end of the lesson directs learners to apply what they have learned to themselves and their church.

Daily devotionals. The next 10 pages are daily devotionals for individuals to use in their quiet times at home. Each daily devotional corresponds to one chapter in Eternal Impact: The Passion of Kingdom-Centered Communities by Ken Hemphill. The devotional and book chapter have the same title, although the numbering of the chapters and devotionals are different.

Each week you will introduce the topic for the week in the small group. The readings for the week will reinforce the content you introduce. That is, the devotionals follow rather than precede the related topic discussed in small groups. After the first session, you may want to include a brief time for group members to reflect on what they have learned during the week. This will be a review of the previous week's study. The final group session wraps up the study and celebrates the changes learners want to make in their lives and in their church.

Seven small-group sessions and 30 daily devotionals are included in learner guides. You may, however, choose another format and adapt the study for that format.

For example, church leaders may want to study this resource on a retreat before introducing it to the church. Then the entire church may study it for the seven sessions given or adapt it for use during an entire quarter by using one book session for two weeks. There is easily enough content for two weeks of discussion in each chapter of Eternal Impact: The Passion of Kingdom-Centered Communities by Ken Hemphill.

Using the Daily Readings

Each week's study in the member book provides five daily devotionals that correspond to chapters in Eternal Impact: The Passion of Kingdom-Centered Communities by Ken Hemphill. They are easy to match because the titles and introductory Scriptures are the same, even though the chapter numbers are not the same. Each daily devotional contains a brief quotation from Eternal Impact: The Passion of Kingdom-Centered Communities by Ken Hemphill. The rest of the devotional in the member book, however, is new content.

The purpose of the devotionals—in fact, the purpose of the entire study—is to help learners develop a personal theology of and appreciation for the church. Many people have never thought about what a church is, how it was formed, or how the contemporary church is similar to or different from the church in the New Testament, particularly the book of Acts. They have not thought about Jesus' founding the church and the church as the way kingdom work continues to be done in the world today. This study will help believers to examine their practices and thinking not only about the church but also about their role in the church and in God's kingdom. The study will lead participants to think about and set goals for their own kingdom work and for discovering with other believers the directions God wants their church to go.

This study should encourage learners to make changes in their lives. Even people who are already active in the church should enter the study with the expectation to grow as Christians in their biblical understanding of the church and their place in it. So from the beginning, you should encourage group members to read daily, to think about their own church attendance and participation habits and how they would like to change them, to think about family involvement and church goals, and to expect to change as a result of this study. If you encourage members to expect to change during this study, the likelihood that they will do so increases significantly. Eternal Impact isn't just about the church; it's about a closer walk with God. It's about transformation to become growing disciples in God's work in the world today.

You may want to ask members to choose accountability partners for this study and to do the daily studies together or to read them separately and then share ideas. Your church may want to provide copies of Eternal Impact: The Passion of Kingdom-Centered Communities by Ken Hemphill for all participants or encourage them to purchase and read both books together as they complete this study.

Eternal Impact Leader Guide

Session 1

1. Read “Section 1: From Foundation to Mission” in Eternal Impact: The Passion of Kingdom-Centered Communities by Ken Hemphill.
2. If possible, preview the DVD segment for week 1.
3. Your group may be a mix of people who are not already in a small group together. If so, plan to use name tags for at least the first few weeks of the study. Make sure everyone has a copy of the member book. Provide Bibles and pens or pencils as needed.
4. Keep in mind throughout this study that people are often private about their basic beliefs. They may have held them since childhood, influenced by their parents. They may hold beliefs without having thought much about them before. When you ask questions, give them time to think. If they give answers that sound like something they memorized in Vacation Bible School when they were children, ask them why they believe or think as they do, even if their answer is right on target. Allow and encourage people to share as they choose without allowing anyone to dominate discussions. Draw out quieter members with low-threat questions. Share as appropriate from your life. You may want to enlist some members in advance to share their thoughts. This will allow them to prepare what they will say while eliminating any embarrassment caused by calling on someone in the session who does not want to talk.
5. Introduce the study by asking, “What things are making a big impact in our world today?” Write their answers on a chalkboard or white board. After the list is recorded for all to see, briefly discuss why they gave the answers they did. Are most of the things listed technology; items from contemporary culture like movies, famous people, and sports; enduring institutions like families, schools, and churches; or a mixture of these? Point out that the church has endured for two thousand years. It is ever evolving yet has many of the same characteristics of the church Jesus founded. In this study the group will look at characteristics of the New Testament church and what you can learn personally and as a church group about the church then and now. Point out that the study will help participants form their own theology of the church, perhaps for the first time considering the role of the church in their Christian lifestyle and their role in the church as a servant in God’s kingdom work.
6. Watch this week’s DVD segment.
7. In advance enlist people to tell stories about being lost—lost as a child, left behind by parents, lost in a parking lot, lost in a strange city, lost when looking for a particular address. Then ask how they found their way. Enlist someone who has used a GPS to talk about how it helps people find their way or stay on track, moving ahead in the right direction. Point out that the book of Acts is the road map or the GPS to provide direction for the church, to keep it focused on its missions and doing what God directed the church to do.
8. Ask members what they know about the founding of the church. Listen for someone to talk about Peter’s confession. Also listen for what others say. You may hear comments that you want to address later in the study.
9. Enlist a volunteer to read Matthew 16:13-19. Use the first section of Eternal Impact: The Passion of Kingdom-Centered Communities by Ken Hemphill to comment on the importance and meaning of these verses.
10. Provide hymnals with “The Church’s One Foundation” and someone to sing “Jesus Is the Cornerstone,” or a recording, or the words, available online. Discuss the questions in step two of the group study guide. Be prepared to add to the discussion from your reading of section 1 of Eternal Impact: The Passion of Kingdom-Centered Communities by Ken Hemphill.
11. Ask everyone in the group to pull out their keys from their purses or pockets. Ask them to list what the keys represent. The keys are likely to homes, cars, lock boxes, and other possessions. The keys may be to offices. The keys represent something important, something valuable, something costly and of significance to the bearer of the keys. Lead a discussion of step 3 in the leader guide.
12. Brainstorm types of power. List them on the board. Focus on gas and electric power. Ask members to recall a time they had no power in their home or they ran out of gas in their car. What did they do? How did they feel? Did they realize they had taken for granted their easy access of power?

Eternal Impact Leader Guide

13. Enlist volunteers to read Daniel 7:16; Matthew 7:29; 8:9; 28;18-20; and Ephesians 3:8-11.
14. Lead a discussion of the questions in step 4 of the group study. Be prepared to add to the discussion from your study of Eternal Impact: The Passion of Kingdom-Centered Communities by Ken Hemphill.
15. Move on to step 5 of the study guide. Enlist members to read these Scripture passages. Lead a discussion of the questions. Do not let this discussion turn into a gripe session about your church with the first question. The focus of that question could be different beliefs among different churches, or within the church it could focus on generational differences, for example.
16. Pray, thanking God for the variety of personalities and gifts He provides among your church members. Pray for unity and growth as your community of faith seeks to follow God's leadership in the days and years ahead.

Session 2

1. Read “Section 2: From Jerusalem to the Ends of the Earth” in Eternal Impact: The Passion of Kingdom-Centered Communities by Ken Hemphill.
2. If possible, preview the DVD segment for week 2.
3. Provide Bibles and pens or pencils.
4. In advance, place a map of the world on the wall. As participants arrive, give each one adhesive dots in two colors. Designate one color for where people were born and the other for the farthest they have ever been from home. Ask participants to place the two dots on the map, where they were born and the farthest point from home that they have traveled. As people arrive, invite them to enjoy casual conversation about where they were born and their travels. When everyone has arrived, invite members to share stories about where they first became involved in a church (perhaps their hometown). Then discuss their travels, especially what they observed about Christianity and how they were able to represent God’s kingdom on their journeys.
5. View this week’s DVD segment.
6. Divide the class into five small groups. Assign each small group one of the steps in the group study in the learner guides. Ask each group to read the Scriptures and discuss the questions. Ask them to plan a way to present the highlights of their discussion to the large group.
7. Allow groups time to work, making sure to reserve enough time for groups to report.
8. Call the groups back together to give their reports.
9. Affirm their work. Add to discussions from your study of “Section 2: From Jerusalem to the Ends of the Earth” in Eternal Impact: The Passion of Kingdom-Centered Communities by Ken Hemphill. Remind participants that they will be reading this content for themselves in the week ahead, along with their daily devotionals in their member books.
10. Ask members to return to their same small groups to pray. Ask them to share personal requests, then requests for fellow church members and the work of your church. Ask them to pray that each member of their small group will hear God’s call to speak to someone about Christ during the coming week.

Eternal Impact Leader Guide

Session 3

1. Read “Section 3: From Character to Function—the Eight Character Traits of the Kingdom-Centered Church,” chapters 11-15 in Eternal Impact: The Passion of Kingdom-Centered Communities by Ken Hemphill. Chapters 16-20 of Section 3 provide the content for Session 4. If you are planning to extend this study beyond 7 weeks, section 3 is a good place to spend more time.
2. If possible, preview the DVD segment for week 3.
3. Provide Bibles and pens or pencils.
4. Bring a stack of newspapers, news magazines, tabloids, and popular magazines, and place them on tables around the room. As participants arrive, invite them to work in pairs to find stories that indicate character matters or does not matter.
5. Place two large sheets of paper on the wall at either end of the room and provide felt-tip markers. Make sure you can write on the paper without damaging the walls. Mark one sheet “Character Matters” and the other “Character Does Not Matter.”
4. After everyone has arrived and had opportunity to participate, ask them to separate their stories into those that indicate character matters and those that indicate character does not matter. Then ask them to list subjects or article titles on the appropriate paper on the wall.
5. Compare the two lists. Initiate an informal, mini-debate about whether character matters. Divide people into two teams. Insist that one team take the side that character matters and the other side that character does not matter. Do not try to resolve this issue.
6. Show the DVD segment for this session.
7. Divide into five small groups to read the Scriptures and discuss the questions listed.
8. Instruct groups to create live news reports related to character as revealed in Scripture and their discussions. Tell them to make their report contemporary, using examples they found at the beginning of this session.
9. Allow time for the reports. Affirm answers. Refer to the chapters from the book, encouraging learners to read the content during the week ahead.
10. Ask participants to return to their small groups. Ask them to list concerns they have about their church related to the topic of their group’s discussion. Some of these may have been voiced during their earlier conversation. List these concerns in the group and pray about each one in the small groups.

Session 4

1. Read “Section 3: From Character to Function—the Eight Character Traits of the Kingdom-Centered Church,” chapters 16-20 in Eternal Impact: The Passion of Kingdom-Centered Communities by Ken Hemphill. If you are planning to extend this study beyond 7 weeks, section 3 is a good place to spend more time.
2. If possible, preview the DVD segment for week 4.
3. Provide Bibles and pens or pencils.
4. Place several large sheets of paper and felt-tip markers around the room on tables. Provide masking tape to attach the paper to the walls when the work is complete.
5. As members arrive, ask them to list old sayings they heard from parents and grandparents along with bits of advice their parents continually emphasized.
6. When everyone has arrived and had opportunity to participate, ask each group to place their lists on the wall. Invite everyone to take a felt-tip marker and to walk around the room reading the sayings and advice. Tell them to write on the paper the character trait represented in the advice. Some of the statements may suggest more than one character trait.
7. Make a list on the whiteboard or chalkboard of all the character traits listed. Point out that most parents and grandparents try to teach their children and grandchildren to have good character traits. Just as individuals seek to instill good character traits into those they love, the leaders of the early church wanted the early church to give evidence of particular character traits. Review the list of character traits from last week’s session.
8. View the DVD segment for session 4.
9. Divide into five groups to read the Scriptures and discuss the questions listed under each. In giving their reports to the larger group, participants should include one summary statement in the form of an old saying or piece of advice that is memorable. Write these five statements on the whiteboard or blackboard.
9. Read Galatians 5:22-25. Make a list of the fruit of the Spirit on a sheet of paper while groups are working so that the list is ready when you get to this point. Lead a short discussion of these qualities that Christians should have in their lives. Which is most difficult? Which is most foundational? Which do members most want to show in their lives?
10. Ask participants to get in groups of two or three to share their struggles and desires to give evidence in their daily lives of these characteristics. Ask them to share one area of life where they struggle to show this fruit, such as at home, with a teenager, with a parent, at work, etc. Then ask people in small groups to pray for one another that they will show godly characteristics in their lives this week.

Session 5

1. Read “Section 4: From Leadership to Gifted Membership,” in Eternal Impact: The Passion of Kingdom-Centered Communities by Ken Hemphill.
2. If possible, preview the DVD segment for week 5.
3. Provide Bibles and pens or pencils.
4. In advance enlist someone in your church who has received ministry from church members to come and tell about their need and how church members helped to meet that need. Enlist someone in the church who is known for ministering to others to share what it means to have the privilege of providing ministry.
5. As participants arrive, ask them to gather in small groups and discuss receiving and providing ministry and what they know about the kinds of ministry your church offers.
6. When everyone has arrived, introduce your two guests to share their experiences of giving and receiving ministry. Conclude this portion of the session by pointing out that members of churches have ministered to one another since the early days of the New Testament church.
7. View the DVD segment for session 5.
8. Divide into five small groups to read the Scriptures and answer the questions provided. As part of each group’s report, ask them to tell one way your church ministers or can minister in a way that applies the Scriptures they read.
9. As groups give their reports, affirm their work and add comments from “Section 4: From Leadership to Gifted Membership,” in Eternal Impact: The Passion of Kingdom-Centered Communities by Ken Hemphill.
10. List types of leaders on the chalkboard or whiteboard (pastor and staff, support staff, teachers, deacons, team members, etc.). List various types of ministries in your church.
11. Voice any needs of these groups or ministries listed. Write these on the board next to the ministry or group.
12. Ask the group to voice sentence prayers for these church leaders and for church ministries.
13. As members leave, encourage them to continue their reading in their devotional guide as well as the B&H book.

Eternal Impact Leader Guide

Session 6

1. Read “Section 5: From Opposition to Victory,” in Eternal Impact: The Passion of Kingdom-Centered Communities by Ken Hemphill.
2. If possible, preview the DVD segment for week 6.
3. Provide Bibles and pens or pencils.
4. In advance enlist one or two people who have been members of your church for a long time to come and tell briefly about their earliest memories of your church.
5. As participants arrive, direct them into small groups of four or five. Ask them to share personal memories of victorious times in the church. These memories can include seeing a child baptized or married, the fellowship on a retreat or missions trip, receiving ministry during a personal crisis, or a special time for the whole church such as entering a new building, significant growth, etc.
6. Introduce the guests and listen as they share a few victorious moments in the life of the church. Ask each small group to select a few of their best stories to share.
7. Transition to this week’s study by saying that they have discussed church victories, but the church has faced some times of opposition too. The early church also experienced both opposition and victory.
8. View the DVD segment for session 6.
9. As groups form to discuss the five segments of this session, ask them as they present their reports of what the Bible said, to share one application for your church—either something your church is doing well and should continue or something you’d like to see your church begin.
10. Encourage the group to finish reading the two books this week. Tell them that the study will conclude next week. Ask them to pray this week about their church and to ask God to give them a vision for what He wants them to do in their church.
11. Ask members to voice sentence prayers praising God and thanking Him for specific meaningful times in the church and for the leaders who made those things happen. Conclude the prayer by asking God to inspire this group of believers to continue the good work of this church in ways that He is calling each person to serve.

Eternal Impact Leader Guide

Session 7

1. Review the main lessons from Eternal Impact: The Passion of Kingdom-Centered Communities by Ken Hemphill.
2. If possible, preview the DVD segment for week 7.
3. Be prepared to share a goal you have as a result of this study.
4. Provide Bibles and pens or pencils.
5. As members arrive, direct them into small groups of four or five. Ask them to look through their books and to share one truth, one verse or Scripture passage, one thing they read, something from a DVD segment, or something from class discussion that was especially meaningful.
6. Watch the DVD segment for session 7.
7. Turn the discussion to your church. Use the questions in the group study to guide your discussion.
8. Brainstorm ideas for what you would like to see happen in your church as a result of this study. Record ideas to share with appropriate leadership teams and committees.
9. Share your goal and ask others to share goals they have made regarding their ministry in and through your church.
10. Pray for God's guidance for individuals in your church and for your church, its mission, and God's direction as you implement your dreams resulting from this study.
11. After the study, share the ideas as planned and directed by church leaders.
