

Apatite Necklace Therapy

Therapy to Restore Communication in the Body

Moving an Apatite necklace from one area of the body to another creates bridges of communication on which healing energy can move between treated areas. This therapy also restores coordination and harmony among organs or other parts of the body that have been traumatized or are otherwise ailing.

Therapy Tool

One therapeutic Apatite necklace

Indications

- A condition that involves more than one organ, such as:
  - A common cold, which can affect the throat, ears, lungs, and/or sinuses
  - Joint conditions in which more than one joint is affected
  - Disease conditions that manifest in more than one localized area
- A condition in which the energetic bridges between one organ and other organs in the body have been weakened or need strengthening, for example:
  - Severe trauma
  - Organ transplant
  - Following surgery (particularly if the surgery required use of a heart-lung machine)
  - You are relatively healthy and wish to enhance your organs' health, vitality, and resistance to disease

Effects

Ideally, when the body is healthy, all its organs and parts are in communication and harmony with each other. When two or more organs or parts are injured or suffering in any way, communication between them becomes compromised, which leads to a further decline in health. Restoring communication among organs is a vital first step before healing can occur.

In this therapy, moving the Apatite from one area to another alerts the intelligence at the whole-being and whole-body levels that this communication can be improved. Apatite provides some resources and rallies others to help restore communication. This support enables the body to accomplish this much faster than it could on its own.

In cases of severe trauma, when the body believes death is near, it begins to prepare for the transition by allowing color rays to recede from the organs. This is followed by a dismantling of the bridges of communication among the body's organs. People who recover from such experiences can use movement and exercise to repair and rebuild these bridges and re-supply their organs with color rays. This Apatite therapy accelerates the natural recovery process. It helps rebuild and repair the energetic bridges among organs, and between organs and other body parts, to restore a harmonious working relationship among them.

The use of a heart-lung machine during surgery damages these communication bridges. This therapy will help reacquaint all the body's organs with each other.

Organ-transplant patients can use this therapy to create vital communication bridges between the new organ and all the others to help the body function as an integrated whole.

A relatively healthy person can also safely perform this therapy to enhance health. Improving communication among organs improves their health, vitality, and resistance to disease. The body responds with a pull-away, the Apatite picks up information, opens flows, and draws subtle-body resources to the physical placement point.

Procedure

1. Bunch the Apatite necklace in your hand and hold it on the area of greatest pain or affliction, or where you believe the condition is centered. Hold it there for a few seconds.
2. Move the Apatite necklace to another area of the body that seems related to the first placement area. Hold it there for a few seconds.
3. Continue to move the Apatite from one area of the body to another, holding it on each area for a few seconds.
  - Allow your intuition to guide you in your placements. Even if you think your placements are random, your body will derive some benefit.
  - Note that one area might call for the Apatite repeatedly. This can happen particularly if the primary target area is the source of an infection that is affecting other organs, an injury that is causing painful compensation in other areas, a transplanted organ, or an area on which surgery was performed. In cases such as these, you may feel an urge to move the Apatite back and forth between the primary target area and other areas.

Time Guidelines

Hold the Apatite at each target area for about three to ten seconds. The entire treatment should last a maximum of 10 to 15 minutes. Perform this therapy once or twice a day.