Green tea, strawberry pieces and natural strawberry essence oils // Blended

Oolong and Flavored Oolong Teas

The word 'oolong' means 'black dragon' in Chinese, perhaps due to the long and large leaf that is typical of the oolong style. Defined as a 'semi-oxidized' tea leaf, oolongs range from greenish (non-oxidized) to almost black (fully oxidized). The distinctive larger leaves allow for multiple infusions and provide a great middle ground between the full-bodied black and the lighter, more vegetal green teas.

601 P $10.50 50g

Bai Hao

Known as the "Oriental Beauty" after the artful leaf style. A more heavily oxidized oolong with a brisk flavor, smooth body, and a fruity finish.

613 P $14.50 50g

Wu Yi

Known worldwide as the “diet tea,” studies show it increases metabolism and suppresses the appetite. Smooth and rich with classic roasted aroma and sweet finish. Notes of raisin, honeysuckle and roasted barley. Oolong tea // China

White and Flavored White Teas

White tea is the least processed of all tea types. It uses only the most select tippy bud sets on the tea plant. (Look closely and the fine silver fuzz on the fragile buds are visible!) Known world wide for its cleansing, anti-aging properties, white tea is rich in antioxidants as well as the amino acid theanine. Be sure to let the kettle sit for 2–3 minutes after boiling before brewing white teas, as the delicate leaves will sear under the heat of boiling water and become bitter. To get the most from your tea, multiple re-infusions are a must!

Champagne Raspberry

Beautifully aromatic tea with an artful & sophisticated blend of raspberries and champagne. Introduced to our menu in 2009 to celebrate our one year anniversary! A permanent part of our menu by popular demand!

What is a Cha Boshi

Cha = Tea Boshi = Master
 Each one of our trained staff members must complete 60+ hours of tea training & a tea test before they are given the title Cha Boshi. Have any questions about our tea? Please ask.

Brewing Tips

Always start with cold filtered or spring water. (Do not use distilled water, as it renders a flat-tasting cup!)

Follow water temperature directions carefully, as water too hot will “cook” some of the more delicate types of tea leaves.

(Timing the cool-down from boiling or using a thermometer is recommended.)

Start by steeping the tea for the shortest recommended time. Taste, then add one minute at a time to discover your favorite brewing strength. Cup character can change dramatically by adding or subtracting one minute. Finding what tastes best to you is part of the “art of tea.”

Many teas are delicious for more than one infusion (brew): merely increase the brewing time by 30 seconds to one minute for each additional steeping (brewing) of the pot or cup!

When the flavor wanes, the leaf has given all it has to give—time to measure more tea leaves!

Did You Know?

- All tea comes from the same plant.
- Over-boiled water results in a flat-tasting tea.
- All types of tea contain antioxidants, polyphenols, and theanine, believed to help fight free-radicals, promote calmness, and increase concentration.
- Tea is the second most consumed beverage worldwide, second only to water!

Also try our tea-infused craft cocktails! We concoct new ones every season, and hand-craft them with our own teas. We also strive to serve only Colorado-distilled liquors in our cocktails! As always, we're here to fit you to a “tea,” so let us know what you like!

Functional Blends: Teas with a Purpose

Please see our Functional Blends brochure (on blue paper)

The ingredients in our “functional blends” provide much more than just a great tasting cup! It's our experience, and the testimony of our customers, that the effects of these blends are real and measurable. Best of all: no side effects! They are well worth a try—let us know what you think and how they work for you!
