

You've had all summer to perfect your barbecue technique—now it's time to get adventurous. This range of rubs from NZ Naturals blends sea salt and kelp with traditional Kiwi ingredients like horopito. Use them in marinades or rub 'em on your fish, meat or veggies for a burst of original flavour. Available from most supermarkets

February is often the hottest month of the year, so now's not the time to slack off with the sunscreen. Invisible Zinc uses natural zinc oxide to reflect UV radiation, just like the fluorescent zinc we enjoyed so much in the 80s — only invisible, thank goodness. The 30+SPF sunscreen has no chemical sun filters and includes an antioxidant moisturiser. www.invisiblezinc.com

If you use eco-bags at the checkout, it feels kinda hypocritical to pile them full of plastic produce bags. Instead, pop your fruit and veg into a Fresh Produce Bag, made from unbleached organic cotton. Three for $6, www.rethink.co.nz

The Brits sure know how to make a brew—even the exotic green stuff. Clipper's was first to put green tea on supermarket shelves in the UK, and now it's available here in Aotearoa. Its lemon peel-infused green tea is the perfect blend of English and Japanese tea traditions: light, refreshing and clean-tasting. Plus, Clipper only works with producers who're improving welfare for their workers. www.clipper-teas.com

Coffee, style and exotic locations: designer Erica Munro has creatively combined them all with her upcycled coffee-sack lamps. All are unique and a percentage of sales goes towards helping coffee-farming families improve their quality of life. You can chose from the range or custom order with the size, style and country of origin of your choice. From $259 at www.cleverbastards.co.nz
