

MONKEY JUMP

HOW TO INFLATE INNER TUBE

1. Locate the valve extender. Unscrew and remove the black cap on the end.
2. Next, take your inner tube and locate the valve stem. Unscrew and remove the black cap on the end.
3. Connect and thread the valve extender onto the inner tube valve stem.
4. Attach your air chuck to the opposite end of the valve stem extender. The use of a needle valve tool is recommended.
5. Now that everything is connected, inflate the inner tube until full. When inflated, the tube should measure approximately 20" high and five feet wide. Standard inner tube inflation to ~6 psi (40kpa).
6. Once the tube is filled the valve stem extender can be removed and the black cap can be threaded back onto the valve stem.
7. Slide the tube down over the top of the Monkey Jump pole assembly. Make sure the valve on the inner tube is facing down toward the ground.

SAFER. BETTER. STRONGER.

WHAT TO DO IF INNER TUBE IS LEAKING AIR

- If the Monkey Jump inner tube is losing air slow, check to ensure the needle valve inside the valve stem is properly tightened.
- Replacement Monkey Jump inner tubes are available. Please contact M&M Sales Enterprises, Inc. at (877)242-0154 or visit www.mandmsales.com for more information.

HOW TO MAINTAIN INNER TUBE

- For the best bounce, please make sure the inner tube is always full. It will require adding additional air from time to time. Please be aware, the lifespan of the inner tube will be determined by several factor. Direct sunlight, over inflation of the tube, sharp objects and other misuses will increase the chances of a blown inner tube.
- Before each use, the inner tube should be visually inspected for proper inflation and any signs of visible damage that might cause it to pop during use. Avoid using any objects that might cause damage to the inner tube during play.
