true to nature

Tree Trunk Arts collects our surroundings, giving every piece a story: an urban adventure, a dog walk, a nature hike. Each element is cast in metal, true to nature, and transformed into a unique piece of jewelry: twigs become earrings, succulents into rings, maple seeds to necklaces.

Nature adorns the body.

meet the artist

Collyn DeBano is the designer and maker behind Tree Trunk Arts. She started the company in 2009, while receiving a degree in Jewelry and Metalsmithing from Grand Valley State University. From her home studio in Detroit, she creates one-of-a-kind jewelry, using a different plant in each casting. Each piece is one-of-a-kind due to the wonder of nature and her unique casting process.

tree trunk arts

process

Tree trunk arts hand casts natural elements in solid silver and bronze. Through the wonder of nature and the artist's spin on the lost wax casting process, each piece is unique. The plant parts are put into a wet plaster then the plaster mold goes into a kiln for 8+ hours, burning out the plant material to create a mold. Molten metal is centrifugally thrown into the mold creating a solid metal model to be then transformed into ready to wear jewelry.

care

To prevent tarnishing, store away from moisture. Do not use commercial jewelry cleaning solutions. Apply a paste of baking soda and water with a toothbrush in a circular motion. Avoid wearing in the water or with sunscreen, lotion, or perfume.
