

PITCHFORK MOSCATO NV

RATING

88

In Australia, moscato is not a grape variety but a style of wine that can be made from a number of grapes which all share the 'muscat' aroma. Some have pink skins. They include gewürztraminer and the various muscat varieties such as orange muscat, muscat gordo blanco and muscat of Alexandria.

This has a fresh-looking pale-pink colour and a very attractive grapy fragrance. The taste is lively thanks to bright acidity as well as a lick of sweetness. The flavour is very light and the finish quite short: a very good example of the style. (Screwcap)
