Witness for His Name

This close-up shows the two views of the subject's face we will need. These poses, as we call them, are easy to set up and easy to take. So, let's get started.

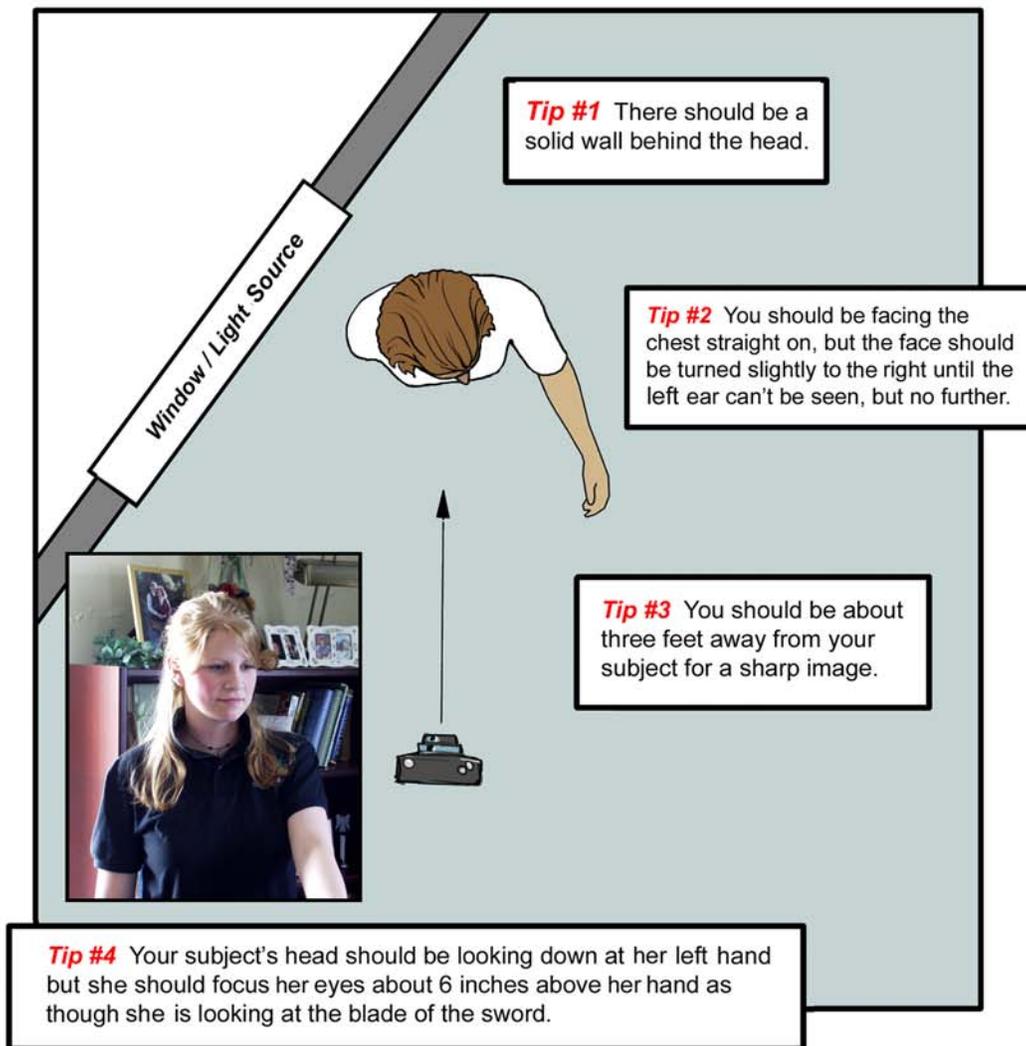

You will see how you can light your subject without any fancy lights or expensive equipment. You will just use the natural light coming through a convenient window.

We will need Three Pictures of each pose, one using your flash but, and this is very important, two pictures of each pose not using a flash.

Pose Two: Three photos /

This is a front view with the subject's face turned slightly to your right and slightly downward. This is the image on the right side of the close up - the one in the mirror. Examine the diagram, follow all the tips and try to make your pictures look like the example.

No matter whether you are taking digital pictures or film pictures, you should take more than you think you will need and then choose the best prints to send to us.

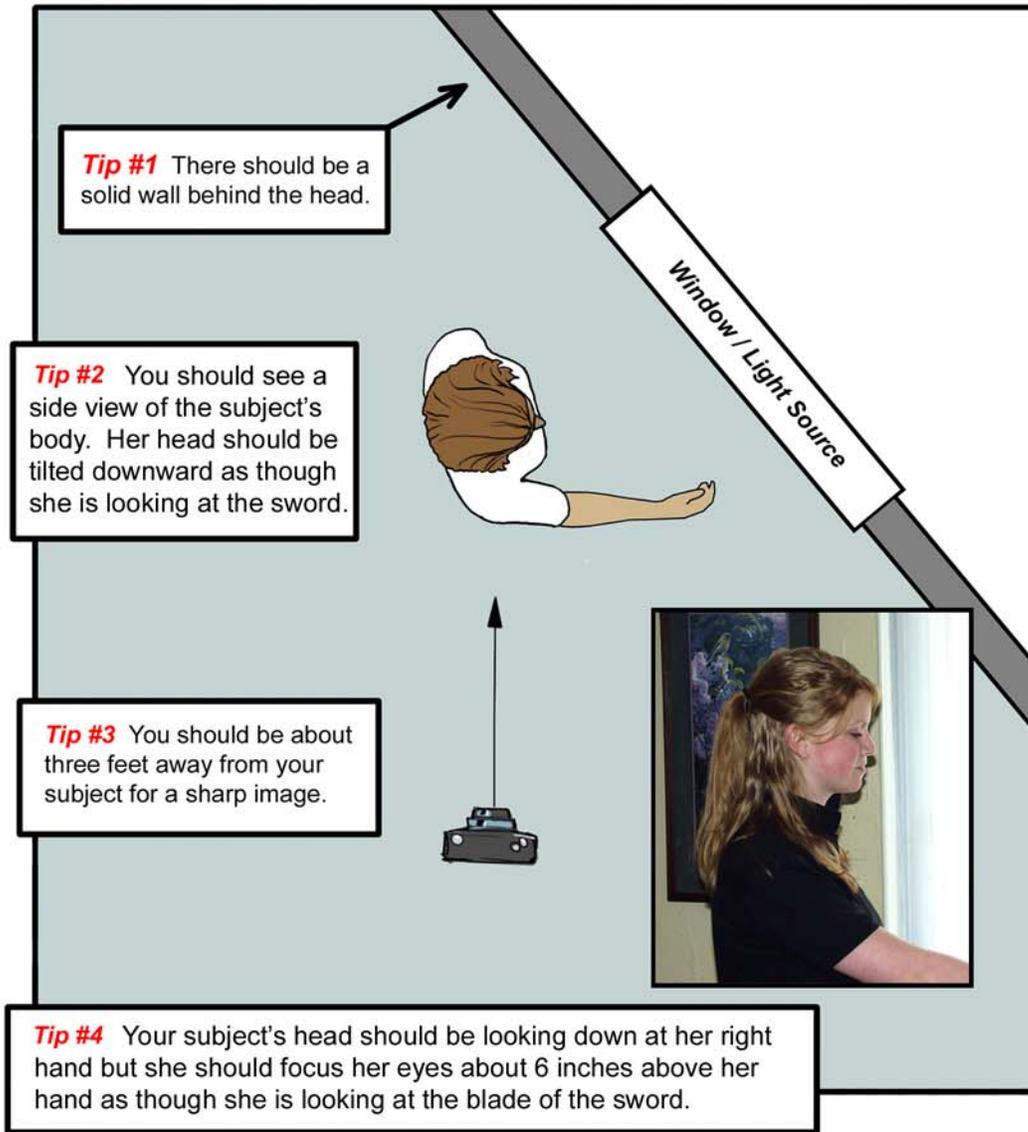

Of the three pictures you send to us, one should be taken using a flash but two should be taken without using your flash.

This is very important since the shadow detail created by the natural light is important to the overall look of the finished picture.

This is a profile with the subject facing to your right. This is the image on the left side of the close up on the previous page. Examine the diagram, follow all the tips and try to make your pictures look like the example.

Key points to look for in your viewfinder...

1. There is a solid surface behind the subject, this allows the camera to pick up the detail in her face.
2. The light illuminates her face as in the example. The face is not flushed with direct light, rather it kind of outlines her features.
3. It is important that there be no direct sun light hitting the subject.
4. Notice that you should see a perfect side profile of her face, which will show the nose, lips and only one eye.
