Abby and Dakota went to the back of the library. Abby put the key in the lock. She looked at Dakota. She took a deep breath and opened the door. The hall light was already on.

"That's funny," Abby said.

Dakota frowned. "What?" he asked.

"The light is on," Abby said.

Dakota shook his head. "All the lights came back on," he reminded her.

"But this one is a motion detector light," Abby explained. "It only comes on when someone walks into the hall."

"Oh," Dakota said in a small voice. He stepped forward and peeked down the

"Where'd she go?" Dandy asked.

They tiptoed forward, peered around the corner and . . . Abhhhhhh!

Beatrice was waiting for them with a sack of sugar in her hand. She fanned the sack, slinging sugar at them. "Never! Never! Never!" she cried.

The boys blinked and sputtered and spit until the sugar storm stopped.

ABOUT TEXT LEVELING

- All Kaeden Books have been assigned Guided Reading Levels based on their text complexity.
- Kaeden Books are leveled using additional leveling systems when appropriate. Complete leveling information is available on our website.
- Levels are subject to change as texts are periodically tested and reevaluated.
- Each leveling system is independent and employs a proprietary method to assess text complexity. The level assigned by one system may not directly correlate to that assigned by another. For further clarification on any leveling system, please contact the organization directly.
