Walker Edison Women in Leadership Summit

SALT LAKE CITY – Last Wednesday, October 28th, was a historic day for Walker Edison as they held their first-ever Women of Walker Edison Leadership Summit.

It was a completely virtual summit available to all Walker Edison employees, including all genders.

The summit started with a morning yoga class and was then followed by three sessions on various topics related to female leadership and women in e-commerce with guest speakers Patricia Jones, Melissa Burdick, and Joana McKenna. During lunch, Neelam Chand gave a keynote address about the power of storytelling and empathetic listening. There was even a floral arrangement class held towards the end of the summit.

The summit helped to support female-owned businesses local to Utah, as well as nationally. All who registered for the summit were sent food for breakfast and lunch from local companies, branded swag including a yoga mat, a S'well water bottle, and all supplies needed for the floral arrangement class.

It was a great day that started a lot of incredible conversations as well as action plans. This is only the beginning as it kicks off Walker Edison's participation in the ElevateHER challenge, and also begins the Women of Walker Edison committee.
