A Guide To Sustainable Sweater Weather

Eight brands that are setting a better example.

Wol Hide

Made in small batches in New York, Philadelphia, and Peru, Wol Hide creates sumptuous knits that will speak to anyone who loves a closet filled with chic, neutral-colored essentials. While the brand stays sustainable by using organically grown and deadstock fabric, it also works closely with a family-owned farm for its cotton, planted from the same breed of seed used by Indigenous communities on the land some 40 years ago.
